Bandwagon Effect In Other Primaries Possible; MacArthur Hopes Blacked Out

(How They Scored, Page 3)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Milwaukee, Wis., April 7.—Harold E. Stassen today placed himself in a strategic position for the Republican presidential nomination with an impressive victory in the Wisconsin primaries.

Late returns gave the 41-year-old former Governor of Minnesota what looked like a certain 19 of this State's 27 delegates to the Republican National Convention.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, his emotional campaign in absentia brought down to earth by a Stassen blitz, was sure of only seven.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, who never before lost a delegate race in Wisconsin, was thrown back on his heels with a possible one or a shutout.

Wins All At-Large

On the basis of returns from 3016 of the State's 3138 precincts, the seven-man Stassen group headed by Walter Kohler, jr., son of a former Governor, and Senator Joseph McCarthy, won by a margin ranging from 23,000 down to about 3500.

With only 122 precincts missing, 10 of them in Milwaukee, Stassen's lowest delegate had 213,931 votes. MacArthur's top delegate, former Gov. Philip La Follette, had 210,216.

Kohler led the field with 233,260.

In the 10 district races, each of which found two delegates chosen, Stassen's candidates won eight places and led in the contests for four others.

MacArthur's backers won six places and led in two others. But in the hard-fought Fifth District, in Milwaukee, the race was so close that Bernhard Gettelman had an opportunity to become the only Dewey delegate elected.

Wait Follow for MacArthur

General MacArthur was knocked out of the national race almost as effectively as if he had been blanked. As one Stassen man put it, his campaign was "more suds than beer."

For Governor Dewey, with his basic reservoir of New York strength and claimed delegate pools elsewhere, it was a serious setback but certainly not decisive.

With the April 13 Nebraska primaries and other delegate tussles coming up, Dewey has announced he will stick to the convention finish.

But for the man who swept the Wisconsin delegates late in 1940 and captured every delegate contest he entered here in 1944, it was a stunning reverse.

In a similar predicament in 1944, and without Dewey's reserve strength, Wendell Willkie dramatically took himself out of the national running.

Some Comfort for Taft

Stassen's name was now in the ascendancy as a potent contender for the Republican nomination. Dewey by stumbling here had damaged his old vote-getting appeal in a year when Republicans want a winner.

The man moose from Minnesota had plainly cast a chill over every other Republican presidential camp by his showing here.

Only GOP candidate who might get some shred of comfort from it is Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio). MacArthur's seven votes here, with the General out of the running, are most likely to go to Taft.

Few of the Stassen people are privately claiming the Minnesotan had read Dewey out of the race, or even given Stassen a clear track.

What they do say is that if Stassen can so badly thrash the New Yorker in this once-strong Dewey territory he can do it again in next Tuesday's seven-man GOP popularity race in Nebraska and later in a direct test with Dewey in Oregon.

They expect Stassen's Wisconsin

U. S. May Be Forced to 'Draft' Men for Key ERP Posts

By Jerry Kluttz

Uncle Sam may be forced to "draft" many people he wants and needs to operate the multibillion-dollar European recovery program.

In short, people in industry are most reluctant to enter the Federal service, and the ranking employes of other Government agencies hesitate to transfer to the new agency. Their reasons are many and varied.

A list of about 250 possible appointees to key jobs in the recovery agency has been compiled by an interagency group. The names on the list were selected, in the main, by industrial leaders themselves as the best qualified people in their respective fields.

Hoffman to Get List

This list is to be given to Paul G. Hoffman, chief of the recovery program, with this warning:

That very few of the people whose names are on the list will accept jobs voluntarily; that about half of them will have to be drafted; that the remainder are willing to help, but their companies must be pushed to release them temporarily from their present jobs.

Hoffman will be told that he must persuade industry generally to get behind him and furnish him with a top staff or else he'll be handicapped from the start.

In general, this resistance applies to people now in Government whom ERA needs, and many of them will have to be drafted.

The Civil Service Commission yesterday was working on a plan to "draft" stenographers, typists, and other experienced clerical help from other Federal agencies here to staff ERA, and,

ERA planners have worked up a plan to "draft" officials and experts from a score of Federal agencies for temporary assignments both here and abroad, mainly overseas. It's proposed to send these people abroad to explain to the French, Italians, British and other participants in the recovery program how to best use the goods and materials we will send them. Agriculture, Labor, Interior, Commerce, Public Health and other agencies have been asked to cooperate in this program.

Meantime, the Civil Service Commission has assured Hoffman that "no blocks" will be thrown in his way in recruiting people for ERA jobs. A spokesman said:

"We consider ERA as great an emergency as wartime. We'll adjust ourselves to any kind of program desired by Mr. Hoffman. We will return to emergency wartime recruiting methods to do the job if that becomes necessary."

Gunshots Attract Scores as Tragedy Is Enacted Near YWCA Entrance

Sobbing as he fired, a 38-year-old man killed his former wife and then fatally wounded himself in front of the Strong residence of the YWCA, 1011 17th st., last night.

The dead:

A witness whose parked car was in the line of fire said he saw the man crying and pleading with the woman as they stood in the areaway leading to the residence just before the first shot was fired.

Miss Knight, with at least two shots in her back, died as she sprawled on the 17th st. sidewalk at the opened door of a parked car. Apparently she sought cover in the car and had partly opened the door before she fell.

Snead fired the .38-caliber bullet through his brain as he stood about six feet from the residence doorway and fell about 20 feet from where Miss Knight lay.

The revolver, with one bullet left in the five-bullet chamber, was found near him. Another slug, possibly the one which pierced his head, penetrated a screen, the window and venetian blinds of the residence office and dropped to the floor.

Shots Attract Scores

The shots drove Ralph Pope, 28, of 901 N. Monroe st., Arlington, Va., and Mary Herbert, 24, of the Strong residence, to cover on the street side of the parked car. Alexander Michaels was sitting in the car with them.

It was Pope who told police of seeing Snead crying before the first shot was fired. The shots drew scores of pedestrians to the scene even before the arrival of police and ambulances. Some said they heard the shots on Connecticut ave. about a block away.

"I turned to them and remarked that the man was crying," Pope said. "The woman seemed to be trying to get away from him and then I heard a shot.

Air Power Sentiment Rises on Hill

Senators Reported Favoring 70-Group Force Instead of Universal Training

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Major revision of the Administration's preparedness program—with invincible air power substituted for universal military training—appeared almost certain on Capitol Hill last night.

Members of the Senate Armed Services Committee—who hold the key to the situation—were reported to be leaning heavily toward a 70-group Air Force program after being closeted with top defense chiefs most of the day.

Several of the Senators said they did not see how the country could afford all three of the rearmament measures before them—greater air power, the draft and UMT—and that the first two seemed to be the most vital.

Draft Sentiment Growing

Sentiment for a selective draft—probably toned down from the Administration's proposal—appeared growing on both sides of the Capitol. Chairman Walter G. Andrews (R., N. Y.) of the House Armed Services Committee said he would introduce a modified draft measure today after consultation with committee leaders.

Probable changes, said one Congressman, include lowering the top age for registration from 44 to either 31 or 35 and establishment of draft quotas for States based on the number of volunteers in uniform. The latter would reduce selective service calls in States with a high proportion of men in the armed services.

Should the 70-group Air Force program be adopted and the land and sea arms be boosted to keep the services "in balance," an additional 250,000 officers and men would have to be added, defense officials estimated. That would give America a two-million-man Army, Navy and Air Force.

It might require raising the top draft age limit above 25, officials said. However, Congress has yet to be sold on the need for "balancing" an Air Force boost by further Army-Navy expansion.

House Favors Air Force

Earlier in the day, the House Armed Services Committee unanimously approved a resolution urging immediate expansion of the Air Force from 55 to 70 groups. Though only a recommendation to President Truman, the action accurately reflects current opinion in the House.

In another development, Senator Richard Russell (D., Ga.) proposed "drafting industry as well as manpower."

Russell, a member of the Senate committee, said he would offer an amendment to the selective service bill, empowering the Government "to take over and operate any factory if it refuses to produce goods required by the defense forces at a fair price."

Members of the Senate committee indicated they were much influenced by testimony from Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington that the 70-group program could be launched with an additional outlay of only 1.8 billions next year.

Flanked by Gens. Carl Spaatz and Hoyt S. Vandenberg, retiring and incoming USAF chiefs of staff, Symington made "formal request" for the greater Air Force at yesterday's closed meeting of the

Lewis Faces Court Action In Contempt Proceedings

Goldsborough Sets Hearing Monday As Clark Charges Order Is Ignored

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

John L. Lewis was ordered yesterday to come to District Court Monday and show cause why he should not be cited for contempt.

The order was issued by Federal Justice T. Alan Goldsborough. He acted on a petition of Attorney General Tom C. Clark.

Clark asserted that Lewis and his United Mine Workers Union had ignored a court order issued last Saturday night. It told Lewis and the union to stop permitting the soft coal strike and get the miners back to work.

A few hours before Goldsborough handed down his show cause order, Lewis' attorneys filed a motion of their own. It requested the court to dissolve the entire restraining order.

Constitutionality Questioned

They said it was unconstitutional and so was the Taft-Hartley Act under which it was issued. Further, they declared Lewis and the union had done nothing to justify issuance of the order.

The union motion was also set for hearing on Monday by Goldsborough.

Besides yesterday's legal moves, a union-operator conference—more "token" than real—was held to bargain on the issues of the walkout. Before it began, Lewis branded it as a "forlorn gesture" and declined to attend in person.

The meeting itself was a product of last Saturday's order. It instructed both sides to begin collective bargaining.

The operators thereupon proposed a session. Lewis replied he would attend if Benjamin [illegible] president of United [illegible] Corp., and George M. Humphrey, boss of the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., would appear too. Lewis said they were the men who could really come to grips with the issues.

Fairless, Humphrey Refuse

But Fairless and Humphrey refused. The operators said it was not up to Lewis to dictate who should represent them.

Before the conference yesterday, Lewis wrote them that it was "unfortunate that you refuse to select a qualified negotiating committee."

"You are profligate with other people's time," he said.

He added that Fairless and Humphrey were "personally responsible for the current confusion in the industry by their failure to urge affirmatively your group to carry out the 1947 contract."

Fairless Singled Out

Fairless was "particularly selfish," Lewis wrote, because he will get an annual pension when he retires of $26,687, and ought to be willing to see a miner get $100 a month after "a lifetime in the mines."

The failure to agree over a miners' pension plan is the root of the present stoppage.

Lewis sent seven union officers to the meeting. At a sometimes heated five-hour session, they questioned the credentials of Joseph E. Moody, head of the Southern Coal Producers Association. They said he personally did not sign the 1947 agreement calling for a pension system and hence had no right to attend the meeting. He remained, however. The pension issue was not reached, however.

Charles O'Neill, spokesman for the mine owners, said credentials of the union representatives would be challenged at today's session, pointing out that Lewis himself was not attending.

What with the petitions by the union and the Government to the court, Monday promises to be a three-ring legal circus, with Goldsborough as ringmaster.

He has also before him, and also set for hearing Monday, a third motion to convert, in effect, the restraining order against Lewis and the union into an 80-day injunction, as provided by the Taft-Hartley Act.

Summary of Motions

Goldsborough began a three-month term as judge of the motions court last Monday. It was in that same role that he found Lewis in contempt in December, 1946, and fined him and the union $710,000.

It will be up to Goldsborough to decide how he wants to handle the cases and whether the hearings on them will be consolidated. Below is a summary of the three motions:

Dewey Seen Hurt by Upset In Wisconsin

Farley Among Those Who Think Blow Might Be Fatal

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, heretofore regarded as the No. 1 contender for the Republican presidential nomination, was badly hurt in Wisconsin's upset primary election.

Nearly all politicians and political analysts in Washington agreed on this yesterday after they heard the result: Harold E. Stassen, first; Gen. Douglas MacArthur, second and Dewey a bad last.

Some thought that the damage would be fatal to Dewey's chances, but others withheld judgment until after the Nebraska free-for-all primary Tuesday.

Serious Blow, Says Farley

A Democrat who used to be pretty good at political analysis, former Postmaster General James A. Farley, had this to say:

"I think that the Wisconsin result is very damaging to Governor Dewey's chances and could be fatal.

"Republican leaders in other States are likely to regard it, justly or otherwise, as a sign that Dewey's vote-getting ability has declined."

"Big Jim," who was attending The Washington Post Book Luncheon in the Statler, said he preferred not to comment on a Republican battle. However, when pressed to say who he thought would benefit most from the Wisconsin result, he replied:

"My own opinion is that it will be helpful to Taft, but more helpful to Vandenberg."

Sees Vandenberg Helped

He said he had long thought that Senator Vandenberg had the best chance of winning the GOP nomination in case of a Taft-Dewey deadlock.

"What about Stassen, who was the man in Wisconsin?" Farley was asked.

"Well, this is bound to increase his stature in the party," he replied, "and it could make him a formidable candidate for second place."

Those who know Stassen, and who are aware of his driving determination to reach the White House, were quite sure that the Minnesotan would not be flattered by Farley's judgment.

Most of the Republican professionals hereabouts concluded that the MacArthur movement had received a knockout blow. If he could not do well in a State where

British Stand 'Provocative' To Sokolovsky

Soviet Marshal Hints Russia May Close Air Corridors Over Zone

Berlin (Thursday), April 8 (AP).—Soviet Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky charged the British today with "provocative aims" in attempting to blame Russia for the collision between a British air transport and a Soviet fighter plane.

The Soviet commander, in his blistering reply to the British protest, hinted that he might seal air corridors over the Soviet zone.

"I hope you will issue the necessary orders to British planes for the strict following of air safety directives outlined by the Allied Control Authority," he said.

"This would forestall me from the necessity of taking measures for the protection and security of traffic over the Soviet occupation zone of Germany and especially over Soviet airports and air in the Berlin district."

Closing of the air corridor into Berlin would cut off the last unrestricted means of access to the German capital by the western powers. Their land transport is now subject to new Soviet control orders which were issued last week and which caused a heightening of tension among the four powers.

Sokolovsky's note was a reversal of his statement to Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, British commander in chief, shortly after the crash Monday. At that time Sokolovsky expressed regrets and assured the British chief that the Soviet pilot's action was not intentional.

Board Committee Reports

Arlington Schools Draft Plan For Ending Half-Day Sessions

Arlington's school board yesterday had a tentative plan ready for putting full-day sessions into effect in first and second grades.

A board committee studying where to put the new classes reported additional or out-of-school space would be needed for only 7 of the 27 schools. Approximately 2700 first and second grade pupils are now on a half-day basis.

To get needed classroom space, the special survey committee yesterday recommended:

1. That four Arlington Schools—Henry Clay, Hume, John Marshall, and Robert E. Lee—use the space the committee feels will be available in nearby churches.

2. That two schools—Fairlington and John Langston—use temporary buildings, obtained as war surplus, to provide a total of four additional rooms.

3. That space in 10 other elementary schools be temporarily "converted" to serve as classrooms. Such conversions would include basement rooms now used as play space in inclement weather.

4. That three schools—James Monroe, Woodrow Wilson, and Woodmont—use already vacant rooms, and that Stonewall Jackson and Woodlawn schools use space now under construction.

5. That Walter Reed School obtain needed space by converting rooms and using facilities in a nearby church.

A committee member said ministers in four churches near elementary schools had given tentative approval for use of their buildings. The churches are Clarendon Methodist, Mount Vernon Baptist, St. Mary's Episcopal, and Christ Methodist.

Loyalty Check Nets Suspect In '35 North Carolina Slaying

The Government's loyalty check yesterday resulted in the arrest of a slaying suspect by Alexandria, Va., police.

The man, who identified himself as Joseph R. Peterkin, 30, a Veterans' Administration chauffeur, told Alexandria police an amazing tale.

He said he fled Winston-Salem, N. C., 13 years ago after a street brawl in which a man was killed. He was drafted into the Army. After the war he obtained a job with VA.

Four times he was fingerprinted, he told police—when he was inducted, when he was discharged from the Army, when he applied for the VA job and when the Government began its loyalty check.

Fingerprints Betray Him

Three times his fingerprints were not detected as those of a man wanted for murder. The fourth time they were.

Peterkin, who lives at 410 S. Royal st., Alexandria, was arrested at 5 a. m. yesterday by Alexandria Detective Robert L. Jones after Alexandria police received a warrant from Winston-Salem authorities charging Peterkin with the murder of a man by the name of Tom Davis in 1935 in the North Carolina city.

A reporter of The Washington Post interviewed Peterkin in his jail cell yesterday and was told this unusual story:

Trieste Action May Be Taken Without Russia

U. S., Britain Consider Independent Return To Italy, Lovett Says

By The Associated Press

Undersecretary of State Lovett yesterday held open the possibility that the Western powers might take independent action on Trieste if Russia declines to agree to return the free territory to Italy.

Lovett told a news conference the Russians have not responded yet to the Anglo-American-British-French proposals to give Trieste back to Italy.

He was asked whether there is any step the Western powers might take to give Italy sovereignty over the part of the territory which they control, in event Russia rejects the proposal.

Lovett replied that there may be. But, he said he would not attempt to answer the question at this time for the record.

Trieste is jointly occupied by British and American troops in a zone bordering Italy and by Yugoslav troops in the zone bordering Yugoslavia.

On other foreign policy questions, Lovett said:

1. Eastern European propagandists are now telling the people of Europe that the State Department did not oppose the House efforts to open the way for Spain to take part in the European Recovery Program. The House vote to include Spain was knocked out of ERP before it was finally enacted into law.

Lovett said State Department opposition was expressed by congressional leaders on the House floor at the time the question was up. He emphasized the department's basic view that whether Spain should be included is up to the European nations already cooperating in the program.

2. Talks between State Department officials and Belgian Prime Minister Paul-Henri Spaak have helped to clarify consideration of measures to back up the proposed western European union. Asked whether military goods might be lend-leased to European countries needing arms and equipment, Lovett said he could not comment because the idea is still in a discussion stage.

Italian Reds Await Soviet 'Ace-in-Hole'

Dazzling Propaganda Maneuver Believed Only Communist Hope

Rome, April, 7 (AP).—Italian Communist leaders have sent a desperate appeal to Russia to offer a major concession to Italy on the eve of the April 18 general election, a foreign informant said tonight.

"Either the Soviets have abandoned their Communist allies in Italy in face of snowballing government strength or they are preparing a sensational last-minute diplomatic blow," the informant added.

Top-flight American observers said Communists were losing ground in the election and they anticipated a spectacular propaganda move by the Communists to bolster their stand.

Said a high Communist Party political agent:

"I can assure you that the last big electoral coup will be in favor of the Communist-led Popular Front."

Government supporters hinted they might spring a surprise on their own account.

"Victory Order" Reported

One unverified report said the Catholic party of Premier Alcide de Gasperi—the Christian Democrats—was planning to expose an alleged Communist victory order already prepared which would "oblige Pope Pius XII to leave Rome" in event of a Popular Front election sweep.

An American political expert here said there was speculation that Moscow might agree to return Trieste to Italy if the Western allies would hand back Italy's African colonies.

"This would really give us the hot foot," the expert commented.

Contributing to Communist nervousness were rumors the Communist-led Confederation of Labor (CGIL) might split over the Marshall Plan.

The United Press reported that the Communist Party claimed in all its official newspapers that American labor opposed the United States policy of "intervention" in Italy.

"Union Messages" Quoted

The Communist paper, Unita, said Communist Labor Boss Giuseppe di Vittorio had received a cable from the CIO National Maritime Union protesting "against the imperialism of Wall Street agents in your elections. We American sailors struggle against the Marshall Plan and the Truman Doctrine (which are) used for snuffing out our and your liberty and for threatening the efficiency of our unions. Last $50,000 Whacked Off

D. C. Slum Clearance Plans Killed by Committee Action

A joint congressional conference committee yesterday dropped Washington slum clearance plans into their "let's forget about it" file.

The conference group eliminated from the Independent Offices Appropriations bill the last $50,000 of the original $3,461,500 requested in the President's budget for launching the 20-million-dollar Washington slum clearance program authorized by Congress two years ago.

The rest of the money had been sliced out by the House. Its representatives in the conference committee took the lead in erasing the final $50,000, members said.

Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.), leader of the Senators in the conference, said his group did their best to keep the $50,000 in the bill but could not persuade the others to go along.

The $50,000 was intended for use by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission for completing the master plan for the slum clearance and redevelopment program.

Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), original sponsor of the slum clearance law, said the decision to erase the planning money was "most regrettable."

He declared "it's a shame that the Capital city of our Nation can't be permitted to rid itself of pllaces of pestilence and disease."

Retained in the money bill were $159,000 for park land purchases in nearby Maryland and one million dollars for completing a Public Roads Administration testing laboratory in Virginia near Chain Bridge.

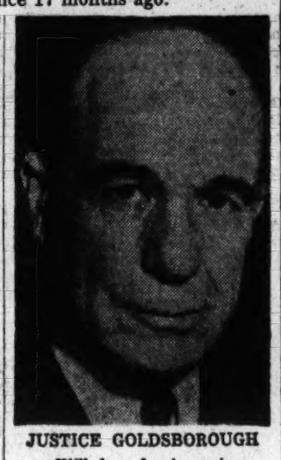
PEOPLE In The NEWS

Justice Goldsborough, 'Kindly, Candid Man,' Has Demonstrated Latter Attribute to Lewis

Justice Thomas Alan Goldsborough and John L. Lewis on Monday will reenact a scene which brought Lewis and his mine workers a bitter experience 17 months ago.



JUSTICE GOLDSBOROUGH
Will face Lewis again

Pure chance placed Justice Goldsborough in the motions branch of District Court in late 1946, when the injunction and resulting contempt citation against Lewis and his miners, growing out of the 1946 coal strike, came up for decision. Again yesterday, he became motions judge just in time to consider a new action against Lewis.

In fining Lewis $10,000 and the union $3,500,000 (the union fine was later reduced to $700,000) on the contempt charge in 1946, Goldsborough, a tall, stubborn 70-year-old former Congressman, gave Lewis a severe tongue-lashing.

"Evil, Demoniac, Monstrous"

When he decided the case on December 4, 1946, Goldsborough told the almost apoplectic Lewis, charged with violating an injunction against the strike, that he should have been sent to jail, adding:

"This is not the act of a low lawbreaker, but it is an evil, demoniac, monstrous thing that means . . . a threat to democratic government itself . . .

The force of the language even startled many of those who knew the jurist as a kindly but outspoken man who always attempts to phrase his opinions in non-mistakable words.

A member of a prominent Eastern Shore family dating back to Colonial days, the justice was active in baseball, tennis and swimming when he attended Washington College at Chesterton, Md., before going on to study law at the University of Maryland.

He started law practice in 1901, was elected State's Attorney three years later, and in 1921 was sent to Congress where he served as a representative for 18 years, resigning in 1939 to join the District Court bench.

Cuts Through Legalisms

Some opponents drew the inference from Goldsborough's appointment that he was being rewarded for his backing of President Roosevelt when the latter unsuccessfully tried to unseat Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) in 1938. But Goldsborough was easily confirmed by the Senate on April 5, 1939.

Just before his nomination was confirmed, Justice Goldsborough received favorable publicity when he went to trial here on a speeding charge and was fined $5, making no effort to plead Congressional immunity.

On the court bench, he is known as a man who tries to cut through legalisms, and some of his rulings have been sharply reversed by the Court of Appeals, but many others have stood as examples of common sense.

A favorite story on this aspect of his court attitude concerns a witness who protested that he could not answer a lawyer's complex question, while the lawyer insisted on an answer.

Brushing aside the lawyer's insistence, the justice declared, "well, the court couldn't answer it either."

Rail Service Faces Another Cut of 25%

Passenger and freight traffic on coal-burning railroads must be cut back to 50 per cent of normal next week if the coal strike continues, the Office of Defense Transportation announced yesterday.

J. Monroe Johnson, ODT director, said he would order a 25 per cent cut "early next week." He has already invoked one cut of that amount. Even with these conservation measures, Johnson said, the railroads' coal supply has dropped to about 22 days as of last Monday.

He advised motor, water and air carriers to prepare for a major diversion of freight to their facilities.

His forecast of rail traffic curtailment orders came as further hard coal miners quit their workings in sympathy with the 23-day bituminous coal strike. By yesterday, 24,500 anthracite miners, out of a total of 80,000 in eastern Pennsylvania, had walked out.

District Has Enough Fuel For 2 Weeks Heating Needs

The District has a minimum two-week reserve supply of soft coal for heat and a five-week reserve for light, a survey yesterday indicated.

Only immediate effect here of the soft coal miners walkout was the furlough handed 130 Washington area train and yard workers by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Commissioners Guy Mason and John Russell Young said they had not received any information to indicate a brownout might be necessary to conserve coal.

However, Young added: "I'm very sure that if the situation makes it necessary we'll do it (order a brownout) again."

B. & O. workers furloughed here were among more than 7000 given notice throughout the road's system, Carroll Bateman, B. & O. public relations representative, said. He reported that coal car loadings in the week ended April 3 declined some 66 per cent from loading the same week in 1947.

"IT HAPPENED THIS WAY . . ."—Mary Herbert, 24, of the YWCA, and Ralph Pope, 28, of 901 N. Monroe st., Arlington, Va., both employed at the Pentagon, witnessed the shooting in front of the "Y" last night and gave their version to a police corporal. They were driven from their parked car by the shots the car. Then there were more shots."

George Harper, 24, of Nashville, Tenn., here for a National Conference of Methodist Youth meeting, was standing a quarter-block away when he heard the shot, he said.

"I then saw a man and woman crouching on the street side of the parked car and as I drew closer saw the other woman sprawled on the sidewalk by the open door of the auto. Her arms were outstretched; her feet still on the running board as though she was attempting to get into the car.

"The man was near the entrance to the building, blood pouring from his head."

Previous Threats Reported

A roommate, Miss Jennie Iwaszkiewecz, said Snead telephoned for her about 8 p. m., but Miss Knight was not in. She appeared a short time later and when informed of the call, went out of the building again.

The shooting took place about 8:30 p. m. Miss Knight was pronounced dead at Emergency Hospital. Snead died there about two hours later.

From Mike Pelekiri, in whose home both of them had lived, police learned he had threatened her on a previous occasion. Fellow roomers described him as an "excitable man with a trigger temper."

Pelekiri, who identified both bodies at Emergency Hospital, said shortly after the threat, the woman left to visit her parents in Tacoma, Wash., and had returned only several days ago. Police said she checked into the YWCA three days ago.

Snead a Veteran

George T. Heckert, assistant administrator of the National Gallery, said he had been impressed with Snead's "intelligence and nice manner." He said the couple were divorced within the last 6 months and that Miss Knight, whom he described as "beautiful," left her job at the Gallery a short time later. She returned to her job last week, he said.

Snead, a former guard at the District jail, had been with the Gallery guard force about 18 months, Hecket said. He also had served in Alaska with either the Navy or Coast Guard and was discharged less than two years ago.

Hoffman Wins Confirmation As ERP Head

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Paul G. Hoffman, 56-year-old president of the Studebaker Corp., was unanimously confirmed as administrator of the Economic Cooperation Administration (ERP) by the Senate yesterday.

The Senate action came 35 minutes after the Foreign Relations Committee had recommended confirmation—also by unanimous vote.

The new director went to work immediately in his room at the Washington Hotel. He said a deputy administrator and a roving ambassador to spot-check distribution of American help in Europe might be named today, or at least within a few days.

The Senate committee acted after Hoffman had spent an hour and a half with it. The recommendation was sent to the Senate floor with a request for immediate action, which resulted in Senate rules requiring a 24-hour wait being brushed aside.

Senators Hear Plans

"They asked me a lot of questions and I tried to answer them," Hoffman told reporters about his session with the committee.

Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg of the committee, reported to the Senate that Hoffman gave the committee a "very satisfactory" account of his past business experience, and also of his plans for handling the vast job of administering the recovery program.

Hoffman, Vandenberg said, met the "primary specification" set by Congress for the job—that the administrator be an "experienced industrialist."

Vandenberg also announced that a "watch-dog committee" of the Senate had been named to work with Hoffman—an arrangement that the new appointee had agreed to. The committee includes Senators Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) and Tom Connally (D., Tex.) who will represent the Foreign Relations Committee, and Senators Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) and Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), who will represent the Senate Appropriations Committee.

House Group to Be Named

House members of the "Watch-dog Committee"—consisting of two Republicans and one Democrat from the Foreign Affairs Committee and one from each party from the Appropriations Committee—are still to be named.

Hoffman, who will have Cabinet rank and a salary of $20,000, will have wide powers under the Economic Cooperation Act. He can determine what aid goes to European countries, and what those countries must do to qualify for it. He can shut off assistance to any nation that goes Communist or that fails to put forth its best efforts to bring about recovery.

Offices will be in the new Maistico Building at Connecticut ave and H st. In a brief interview Hoffman said his staff would be named as quickly as possible, and that it would work as "closely as possible" with congressional committees.

Hoffman's job, one of the most influential nonpolitical posts in the Nation's history, will be to administer not only the $5,300,000,000 European Recovery Program, but also the civilian aspects at least of the $463,000,000 Chinese Aid Program voted by Congress last Friday along with the one to four year European recovery operation.

Hoffman said he would give up all his private business connections—whether by outright resignation or by leave of absence he hadn't determined.

The program runs until June 30, 1952, although Congress will have to reauthorize it and appropriate new funds each year.

D. C. Stassen Backers Elated, General's Men Determined

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

"We think he's a superman!"

There was a mood of elation in the Washington office of Presidential Candidate Harold E. Stassen yesterday—but even more there was an outspoken admiration for "the Governor."

It was pretty, dark-haired Betty Crites, office secretary, who explained the Minnesotan's sweeping victory in the Wisconsin GOP delegate race with the above five words.

"Sure, we were surprised," she said. "But you know," Miss Crites confided, "Governor Stassen is an extremely brilliant man, and we're optimistic about anything he does."

There is no Stassen campaign headquarters here. Since early '47, however, former Governor of Minnesota and candidate for the GOP's presidential nomination has maintained a small suite in the LaSalle Building, 1028 Connecticut ave.

The lobby door to Suite 900 opens into a vestibule, and the visitor looks smack into a head-and-shoulders photo of Navy Captain Stassen, hatless but otherwise in dress blues. There are three modest offices: one for Miss Crites, who doubles as receptionist; one for red-headed Leonard E. Edwards, currently filling in as Stassen's Washington aide; one for Stassen when he comes to town.

Aide Edwards didn't seem to be very excited, on the surface, over the Wisconsin landslide.

"We expected a majority," commented Edwards. "Governor Stassen had stated he expected at least 14 delegates in the Wisconsin race, and he usually calls his shots conservatively."

There's no Dewey headquarters here, but at the MacArthur-for-President headquarters, three blocks up Connecticut ave., on the fourth floor of No. 1333, there were three distinct reactions to the Wisconsin race.

Reaction 2, from a "Mr. Stratton": "We're for Americanism, and against Wallace."

Reaction 3, from Ervin Hohensee of College Park, Md., headquarters secretary: "We are more determined than ever."

Hohensee, an accountant, said he had opened the MacArthur-for-President headquarters here on March 5, four days before the general formally announced he wouldn't refuse the presidential nomination.

"The Wisconsin election shows we have to put in more activity," Hohensee analyzed. "It also proved the opposition is spending money like water."

The MacArthur-for-President headquarters is draped with American flags, a portrait of General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, by John Lamar (1942); a copy of the Declaration of Independents; and a huge war poster of the Pacific military leader. The poster is captioned: "We Will Win or Die."

Wallace Sees U. S. 'Shaking With Fear'

Indianapolis, April 7 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace, third party presidential candidate, asserted tonight that Americans "are the victims of a deliberate campaign to create fear."

The former Vice President, making the second of three Indiana speeches, accused the national Democratic Administration and "the bipartisan bloc" of using Nazi technique in "their psychological warfare against the American people."

"We who meet here this evening are citizens of the greatest, the richest, the most powerful Nation in the world," he said. "Yet we meet as citizens of a Nation which is shaking with fear. We are trembling from the attacks of headlines and commentators.

"We are the victims of a deliberate campaign to create fear. It is a campaign designed to win support—the suport of frightened people—for policies which would put our economy completely at the mercy of the military and international big business."

Wallace said that "this campaign of breeding fear threatens the very foundations of our democracy."

Lewis Faces Court Action In Contempt Proceedings

order, signed by Justice Matthew F. McGuire, be quashed.

Their argument was that it violates the First, Fifth and Thirteenth Amendments to the Constitution. These guarantee free speech and assemblage and due process of law, and prohibit involuntary servitude.

Injunction Attacked

Similarly, they said, the injunction procedure of the Taft-Hartley Act violates those same guarantees. The court, the union brief argued, cannot commit the miners to involuntary servitude, nor can it order the union to do so.

Further, the Taft-Hartley Act itself says no man shall be forced to work against his will. And the contract under which the miners operated specified that they need not work if they were not "able and willing."

In a sworn statement attached to the petition, Lewis reasserted his contention that he did absolutely nothing to call the men out on strike, and that their quitting was on their own volition, acting as individuals.

Order Could Be Vacated

It might be that Goldsborough would consider this motion first. If he was convinced that there were no grounds for the restraining order, he could vacate it, and that would end the whole court proceeding. If not, however, he could then go on to hear:

2. The Government's request for a contempt citation. The Attorney General claimed that Lewis and the union had done nothing to comply with the restraining order, insofar as it instructed them to stop engaging in, permitting or encouraging the strike and to call on all miners to return to work.

If Lewis and the union officers cannot convince Goldsborough that they have "purged" themselves of contempt, a trial on the matter will begin on Wednesday, the justice ordered.

If found guilty, they could be fined and jailed.

3. Motion for 80-day injunction. In the original restraining order, Justice McGuire provided that it should expire next Tuesday evening, but that on Monday there should be a hearing on whether to grant a full injunction under the new labor law.

Such an injunction would be a prohibition against the strike and would stay in force for 80 days. In the meantime, the Federal Mediation Service would try to arrange a settlement. A presidential board of inquiry would be reconvened, and, if necessary, all the strikers would be polled by the National Labor Relations Board on the question of whether they would accept the employers' last offer.

It was noteworthy that the Attorney General's petition yesterday, complaining that Lewis had not complied with the restraining order, made no mention of one part of it. This had to do with instructions to both Lewis and the operators that they fall to in good faith to bargain collectively.

The order said that all persons who had previously negotiated agreements be obliged to bargain again. This was taken to refer to Lewis on the one side and Fairless and Humphrey on the other.

It was a matter of speculation yesterday whether, in a subsequent motion, the Department of Justice would try to force Lewis and Fairless and Humphrey to bargain directly with each other.

Pardons Denied 45 Convicted in Milk Strike

Pardons have been denied to 45 persons convicted last year in the Louisiana milk strike, the Justice Department said yesterday.

Applications of seven others who applied for pardons still are pending. The 52 strikers were convicted of interfering with interstate commerce by stopping milk trains and trucks.

file of several thousand applicants for ERA jobs, more than enough to fill the estimated 1500 to 2000 jobs to be set up in the recovery agency. In fact, an ERA planner said:

"We have had a surprisingly large number of letters and personal calls from sincere and apparently well-qualified people who have offered to join the recovery program because they believe, like Mr. Hoffman, that it's an opportunity to work for world peace. But by and large," he explained, "most of the people ERA will need won't come in voluntarily; ERA will have to go after them."

People in industry who have been sounded out in joining ERA generally shy away for one or more of these reasons:

1. They can't afford to accept a Federal job. Most of them are making more than they could be paid by the Government. The cost of moving their families and finding a home here would be great. However, ERA can offer a larger proportion of high-paid jobs than any other agency. The law gives the administrator authority to pay $10,000 salaries up to 75 employes and $15,000 salaries for 25 employes.

2. Abuse from congressional committees. Some of the people have been here before and they've either been kicked around or they know somone who has. Others have read the statement of Chancellor Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago, who advised his faculty members and graduates not to enter Federal service because they will be exposed to unwarranted abuse and criticism from members of Congress.

The general difficulty in interesting key industrial people in Federal jobs has given top Administration officials an idea—the creation of an industrial reserve corps to be patterned after the military reserve.

Members of the proposed industrial reserve would be experts in their fields; they would be subject to temporary Federal duty on either a consultant basis or up to several months a year, and they would be kept in close touch with Government management problems.

Actually, the idea of the industrial reserve originated with several former Federal officials who are now in industry. The plan is being put on paper by Federal officials.

The plan to draft experienced clerical help from other agencies here for ERA stems from a shortage in this field. Civil Service has orders for more than 1500 stenographers and typists, for example, which it is unable to fill.

Federal workers in the middle and top brackets who now have "safe" jobs are reluctant to leave them to join ERA or any other temporary agency. They recall that many of their colleagues who joined the war agencies a few years ago were shuffled out of their jobs and that they were fired with little or no notice after the war.

Civil Service would help matters if it would come out with a fool-proof system of job security for those employes who accept transfers to ERA.

There's no question about it, adequate and effective manpower is now Mr. Hoffman's No. 1 problem.

Dewey Not Upset By Wisconsin Vote

He's Optimistic

Taft Ends 3-Day Tour In Nebraska

Invades Nebraska, Confident of Victory In Primary There

Fremont, Nebr., April 7 (AP).—Senator Taft's Nebraska campaign chief tonight congratulated Harold E. Stassen on his Wisconsin victory but reminded him he "has yet to come up against the champ" from Ohio.

Taft himself wound up a three-day campaign tour with a speech on national defense after remarking earlier that his "prospects look good" in Nebraska's April 13 all-star primary.

Stassen is scheduled to open his final Nebraska drive tomorrow.

Taft once more coupled his opposition to universal military training (UMT) with a plea for a dominant air force in an address prepared for delivery here tonight.

"Universal military training . . . certainly seems to have no value as a solution of the present emergency," Taft declared.

Must Provide Men

The Ohio presidential contender has voiced his UMT and air power views in most of his 14 talks as he barnstormed across Nebraska.

"Certainly we must provide the number of men required for the ground forces and the Navy," Taft told his Fremont audience. To get the number of men we require it may be necessary to adopt selective service at least temporarily."

Taft was joined by his wife, Martha, for the final Nebraska appearance. She has been stumping the northern part of the State. The last item on Taft's schedule was a CBS radio broadcast at 10:30 p. m. EST, of the foreign policy address he delivered at Lincoln yesterday.

Taft's supporters, chief of whom is Senator Butler (R., Nebr.), expressed belief that Butler's following, along with Taft's personal tour, would bring the Ohioan victory in his first primary contest against Stassen and Dewey.

Comments on Wisconsin

Taft himself told a press conference he believed the Wisconsin results "tend to show that a primary is largely won by organization and personal campaigning."

Although seven candidates are listed on Nebraska's free-for-all ballot—Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and General MacArthur among them—there was fairly general agreement that Stassen, Taft and Dewey are the leading contenders.

En Route With Dewey to Nebraska, April 7 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tonight chalked off his Wisconsin defeat as only one lost round in a long fight for the Republican presidential nomination.

In good spirits—outwardly at least—the New York Governor raced by plane from Albany to Nebraska to make a two-day campaign for backing in the State's preferential primary next Tuesday.

He launches his drive at Grand Island immediately after landing there this evening. He will speak in 10 communities, including major addresses at Lincoln and Omaha.

Dewey and his advisers are openly confident the Governor will make a strong showing in Nebraska despite having trailed Harold E. Stassen and Gen. Douglas MacArthur in yesterday's Wisconsin primary.

James C. Hagerty, Dewey's executive assistant, predicted the Governor "will do well" in the Cornhusker State, where he will stack up against Stassen, MacArthur and four other avowed or potential rivals for the nomination. The State will elect 15 delegates to the GOP National Convention.

"Dewey has just begun to fight," Hagerty said. "He has a majority of the 309 delegates selected to date in 14 States."

The Governor, commenting on the Wisconsin results, said: "Now we've won one primary and lost one. We're on to Nebraska, where there are no favorite sons."

Dewey forces volunteered that Stassen's Wisconsin victory, put him definitely in the front ranks; and that he could have the vice presidential nomination almost without question.

The Dewey people believe MacArthur has been eliminated as a serious contender.

They say also that the Wisconsin vote indicates the people do not want a military man in the White House.

Three days before the Wisconsin balloting, Dewey predicted he would trail MacArthur and Stassen in the number of delegates captured there. His written forecast, sealed in an envelope and opened today aboard the plane by a newsman to whom he had given it, read:

MacArthur, 19; Stassen, 6, and Dewey, 2.

The Governor miscued, however, on his forecast of the popular vote, placing MacArthur first, himself second and Stassen third. The actual count showed it was Stassen, MacArthur and Dewey in that order.

Delegate Line-up in Wisconsin

Milwaukee, April 7 (AP).—Here is the probable list of Wisconsin delegates to the Republican National Convention, based on the latest available semiofficial returns:

DELEGATES AT LARGE (3016 precincts out of 3138—Including 569 in Milwaukee County):

Walter J. Kohler, jr., of Sheboygan, son of a former Governor (Stassen); Senator Joseph R. McCarthy of Appleton, (R., Wis.) (Stassen); George Greeley, of Oshkosh (Stassen); State Senator Arthur A. Lenroot, jr., of Superior (Stassen); State Senator Melvin J. Olson of South Wayne (Stassen); Wilbur N. Renk, Sun Prairie farmer (Stassen); and Loyal Eddy of Wauwatosa, State Young Republican chairman (Stassen).

FIRST DISTRICT (all precincts complete): John E. Mateson of Janesville (Stassen) and Charles E. Lyon of Elkhorn (Stassen).

SECOND DISTRICT (238 of 306 precincts): Richard C. Smith of Jefferson (Stassen) and Helen Eby of Madison (Stassen).

THIRD DISTRICT (338 out of 371 precincts): Foster Porter of Bloomington (Stassen) and Everett Yerly of La Crosse (Stassen).

FOURTH DISTRICT (263 out of 274 precincts)—Herbert A. Braun, Wauwatosa (MacArthur), and Lansing Hoyt, Milwaukee, National MacArthur-for-President chairman (MacArthur).

FIFTH DISTRICT (295 out of 305 precincts)—Harlan W. Kelly of Milwaukee (MacArthur), and Dr. Ralph P. Sproule of Milwaukee (Stassen). (In this district, State Senator Bernard Gettelman of Milwaukee (Dewey) and Anita K. Koenen of Milwaukee (MacArthur) are trailing Sproule by 112 and 373 votes, respectively, and have an outside chance of moving into the picture on the basis of returns from the 10 missing precincts.

SIXTH DISTRICT (212 out of 215 precincts)—Dr. John P. Koehler of West Bend, former Milwaukee health commissioner (MacArthur), and Delbert Kenny, West Bend manufacturer and former unsuccessful Republican candidate for Governor (MacArthur).

SEVENTH DISTRICT (350 out of 375 precincts): State Senator William W. Clark of Vesper (MacArthur) and Mrs. Helen C. Laird of Marshfield, widow of a State Senator, (Stassen). (Another Stassen delegate, George C. Landon of Wausau, is running third only 266 votes behind Clark and could, possibly, move into the picture on the basis of returns from the 25 missing precincts.)

EIGHTH DISTRICT (265 out of 286 princincts): Marshall C. Graff of Appleton (MacArthur) and Attorney Walter P. Melchior of Appleton (MacArthur).

NINTH DISTRICT (337 out of 376 precincts): State Senator Warren P. Knowles of New Richmond, GOP State floor leader, (Stassen) and Connor T. Hansen, Eau Claire.

TENTH DISTRICT (346 out of 403 precincts): Harry Simon of Ashland (Stassen) and Mabel Gross of Stone Lake (Stassen).

Victory Big Boost to Stassen

win to have some bandwagon effect on the Nebraska and Oregon votes, on the theory that politicians like to ride a man who's climbing.

Prior to his Wisconsin victory, Stassen claimed he had corraled 230 of the 547 GOP delegate majority required to nominate the next candidate at the Philadelphia convention.

But observers can count only about 78 Stassen votes as "definite" at this time—10 in Iowa, 10 in Maine, 11 in South Dakota, 25 in Minnesota and 2 in New Hampshire.

Stassen won in Wisconsin after a seldom-equaled man-to-man canvass of this fickle State from the Illinois border to the northern woods. He made five separate trips to Wisconsin and hit an estimated 38 towns and cities, some of them twice or more.

After every speech he answered any question fired at him from the house, barring none, made it a point to shake hands and say howdy to everyone as they left.

Gave Flat Answers

This direct approach even partially won over a delegation of State AFL leaders, hitherto friendly to Dewey. They came around to see Stassen the night after the New York Governor left, saying Dewey kept their conference with him here on a friendly "discussion" basis. They wanted flat answers, Stassen gave them.

Stassen claimed a Wisconsin majority even when the MacArthur boom, talked up by a strange alignment of old progressives, conservative Republicans and America Firsters, was at its peak. Stassen never believed the MacArthur strength was "solid." He publicly charged the boom was blown oversize by the Chicago Tribune and Hearst press circulating here.

The MacArthur people used only one theme—their man alone could stop Russia, without war.

Dewey, apprised by his advance men that it looked like a MacArthur victory, with Stassen running second, made a worried, last-minute stump of the State, but told friends he knew it was too late and he did not expect to do well here.

In their closing campaigns, both Stassen and MacArthur veered more and more to MacArthur's "Stop Russia" tempo. Stassen said he would outlaw the Communist Party as a subversive arm of the Soviet. Dewey said the only way to deal with Communists is to keep them out in the open, that a statute outlawing them would just drive them underground.

Finally the Stassen people staged an eleventh-hour "blitz" to disprove the old chestnut that election outcomes aren't changed in the final week. While Stassen himself worked one end of the State, "Paul Revere" squadrons of young Stassenites hit others. Another battalion of Stassen volunteer workers buzzed the voters at their homes in personal telephone appeals right up to the final hour.

When his victory became apparent, Stassen issued a formal statement from his home in St. Paul, Minn., saying he was "humbly thankful" to the people of Wisconsin for their "exceptional" vote. He said he was sorry he had to compete with MacArthur.

"I sincerely regret that the action of a group of citizens in entering the name of the great general, Douglas MacArthur, in the primary made it necessary for me to be in a position of rivalry on the ballot as I have a very high personal regard for the distinguished leader of our armed forces," Stassen said.

"We will not redouble our efforts to build a truly liberal Republican Party with the twin objectives of expanding liberty without another world war, and maintaining a dynamic free economy without a depression."

En route to Nebraska for two more days of campaign, Dewey reacted this way:

"Now we have won one primary (New Hampshire) and lost one primary (Wisconsin). We are on to Nebraska where there are no favorite sons."

Throughout his two-day tour here last week, Dewey always referred privately to Stassen as well as MacArthur, as "favorite sons." MacArthur lived briefly here before entering West Point, but Stassen never lived here although his own State borders Wisconsin.

There is less political opprobrium to defeat by a favorite son. But in this case Dewey was beaten by a man from outside the State, like himself, as well as by the lone favorite-son entry, MacArthur.

Stassen will leave by plane tomorrow for Nebraska to wind up his campaign for Cornhusker delegates in next Tuesday's primary. He has scheduled stops at Lincoln, and Huskerville, Thursday and at Columbus and Norfolk, Nebr., on Friday.

Dewey Still In Lead With 108 Delegates

By The Associated Press

Harold E. Stassen zoomed to second place in the delegate count in his race for the Republican presidential nomination yesterday as the returns nailed down his Wisconsin primary election triumph.

The vast majority of the 1094 convention votes remained to be chosen.

Thomas E. Dewey was on top of the count with the 90 delegates from New York which fell into his pocket in yesterday's voting without contest. Officially they are unpledged, but the Republican State organization chose the slate. That means Dewey gets them.

Here is the lineup of the 305 named so far, as nearly as it can be tallied on the basis of instructions and commitments:

Dewey 108 (New York 90, Oklahoma 12, New Hampshire 6).

Stassen 46 (Wisconsin 19, Minnesota 25, New Hampshire 2).

MacArthur 8 (Wisconsin).

Uninstructed 102.

There are conflicting claims for support of the uninstructed group.

On the Democratic side, President Truman has 54, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower 1, and 135 are uninstructed for a total of 190 chosen.

Mr. Truman's delegates are 12 in New Hampshire, 24 in Wisconsin, 6 in Alaska and 12 considered favorable to him in Arizona. His supporters also claim an indefinite number of New York's uninstructed delegation of 89. Arkansas has 22 and Louisiana 26 uninstructed.

The Republicans will name 1094 delegates altogether, the Democrats 1234. A simple majority is necessary for nomination at each convention.

The 102 uninstructed GOP delegates include: Iowa 23, Maine 13, Kansas 19, North Carolina 26, Arizona 8, Louisiana 13. Dewey and Stassen forces claim support of a majority in Maine and Iowa. Dewey's camp also claims most of those in Kansas.

Neither Senator Taft of Ohio nor Governor Warren of California, both declared candidates, has as yet contested for any delegates in primaries, but will do so next week in Nebraska.

MacArthur Petitions Fall Short in California

Los Angeles, April 7 (AP).—Reports from the four California counties where petitions were filed to place Gen. Douglas MacArthur's name in the June 1 Presidential primary showed today that they failed to obtain the required number of signatures.

With 7352 signatures necessary to get MacArthur's name on the Republican ballot, Allen H. Worcester, who headed the movement contrary to the General's expressed wishes, said the drive had failed.

Los Angeles County Registrar Michael J. Donoghue said that of 10,013 names filed with him only 5901 were approved.

Dewey Seen Hurt by Upset in Wisconsin

he was a favorite-son candidate, they asked, how could he expect to do well elsewhere?

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), a leader of the MacArthur group on Capitol Hill, said:

"MacArthur may see fit, in view of this slap in the face, to withdraw. I don't know."

General MacArthur, who said he was willing to accept the GOP nomination a month or so ago, heard the bad news in Tokyo, but had no comment.

Tait Voices Opinion

Galen Tait, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Maryland, said that the most significant aspect of the Wisconsin result was MacArthur's failure.

"I think this pretty well disposes of MacArthur as a serious candidate for the Presidency," Tait said.

He thought that Stassen had helped himself, but he pointed out that the Minnesotan was campaigning in a neighboring State. Turning to Dewey, whom he has been backing in Maryland, Tait said he did not think that the Wisconsin result had done him "any serious damage."

Vote Democratic, Says McCormack

Representative John McCormack (D., Mass.), minority whip of the House, said that the Wisconsin voting showed that the American people are "progressive-minded." He added:

"Of course Stassen cannot get the Republican nomination and he is the only progressive in the Republican Party. That leaves the Democrats as the only party to vote for."

Other comment:

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.): "Wisconsin had the choice of three good men and apparently their neighbor from across the river, because of his appeal from county to county, took the bacon."

Brown Boosts Taft

Representative Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio), Taft's campaign manager: "I don't think it hurt Taft any, since he wasn't in the primary. Possibly it helped him some."

He expressed regret over the "bitterness" in the Wisconsin campaign, and said Taft's nomination would bring party unity.

Representative Jonkman (R., Mich.) who represents the Michigan district in which Vandenberg lives: "Maybe it helps clear the way for Vandenberg."

Representative Woodruff (R., Mich.): "It appears to have eliminated Mr. Dewey and established the fact that the people, since those in Wisconsin are no different from those anywhere else, do not want a military man for President."

Representative Hoffman (R., Mich): "I'm not surprised. Stassen is a new girl in town and the Wisconsin voters flocked after him. I don't think Dewey will pull a Willkie. Now Dewey might consider second place on the Stassen ticket. (The late Wendell Willkie withdrew from the 1944 race after his defeat in the Wisconsin primary.)

L. E. Edwards, Stassen representative here, said that the Wisconsin result would prove a "psychological advantage" for Stassen in forthcoming primaries.

An old foe of Dewey, former Representative Hamilton Fish, a New York Republican, suggested that Dewey ought to follow Willkie's example and pull out. He added:

"Dewey's nonveteran feet-of-clay collapsed when he tried to keep up with real war veterans such as Stassen and MacArthur in the march across Wisconsin. After the Wisconsin debacle, the Republican delegates of New York State should feel free to vote their own minds in the best interests of the party and the Nation."

Nebraskan Tells Dewey Stassen Is Man to Beat

Grand Island, Nebr., April 7 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was advised by a Nebraska Republican leader tonight that Harold E. Stassen is "the man to beat" in next Tuesday's free-for-all primary.

Mrs. Edna Basten Donald, Republican national committeewoman, told the New York Governor that from her observation "the situation has not jelled," and that she expected the primary "to be a horserace between Dewey and Stassen."

Mrs. Donald said there was "a general feeling" that Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) had lost strength during a three-day tour which ended tonight at Fremont.

Czech Labor Group Approves 1 Party

Communist Plan for Parliamentary Elections May 23 Favored by Central Unit

Prague, April 7 (AP).—The mammoth Central Trades Union Labor Organization approved tonight a Communist proposal for a single ticket in Czechoslovakia's parliamentary elections May 23.

Union officials said a formal vote on the proposal would be taken tomorrow.

Leaders of political parties which lost out recently when the Communists seized control of Czechoslovakia have indicated they would present slates of candidates in the national elections. Pro-Communist parties had planned separate slates also.

It was assumed that any law limiting Czech election rolls to a single slate of candidates would be written into the constitution which now is being revamped.

A single ticket would mark the end of the type of government which President Eduard Benes has always insisted must be maintained in Czechoslovakia. Last year he even fought to keep Communists in the cabinet against attacks by their foes.

Finns Seen Ratifying Pact Soon

Helsinki, Finland, April 7 (AP).—Finnish political sources predicted tonight that Parliament will ratify Finland's new 10-year friendship and military pact with Russia by late next week.

The pact has the prestige of President Juho Paasikivi behind it. He may make a broadcast to the Nation supporting it. If Parliament balks, he could threaten to resign.

Deputies in Parliament will take new soundings of public opinion in the light of the published text of the treaty signed in Moscow last night.

Leading Finnish political observes said Article 2; providing for consultation on whether a threat of attack exists before military cooperation with Russia becomes operative, was the weak point in the treaty.

These leaders said the weakness is that the word "threat" is open to interpretation.

"Who is to establish this threat?" the rightist newspaper Kauppalehti asked. "How great will be our actual influence in the negotiations which are to be started when such a threat will have been established?"

11 Pay Extra For Boarding Car Through Exit Door

Two pass-riding streetcar passengers paid $2 fines each yesterday for boarding their homebound car through its exit doors.

Neilson

At that, they got off $3 cheaper than nine others arrested with them who elected to forfeit $5 collateral.

The fines, levied by Judge George D. Neilson in Municipal Court, were the first imposed under order of April 1 of the Public Utilities Commission designating the once-prevalent practice an offense.

Fined were Emmanuel Fairley, 48, of 1746 Benning rd. ne., and Casby E. Johnson, 43, of 700 Langston ter. ne. They were among 11 arrested last Friday at 8th and H st. ne.

Rid Americas Of Colonies, Parley Urged

Bogota, Colombia, April 7 (AP).—Argentina and Guatemala asked the Inter-American Conference today to invoke a doctrine of America for the Americans and rid the Western Hemisphere of foreign colonial possessions.

Argentine Delegate Enrique Corominas took that stand in defending his country's claims to the British-held Falkland Islands and Antarctic territory extending to the South Pole.

Corominas indorsed a Guatemalan proposal recommending the elimination of European colonies—the British Honduras, British, French and Dutch Guianas and the West Indies—and recommended that it be amended to include the Falkland Islands and the Antarctic region.

Guatemala is expected to propose creation of a permanent commission representing the Pan American Union to negotiate directly with the European powers.

The Argentine proposal was indorsed also by Enrique Bernstein of Chile, which also has claims to Antarctic territory.

The United States delegation proposed that legal disputes among the American nations be solved by the International Court of Justice instead of compulsory arbitration espoused by several Latin-American countries.

United States officials said Latin America can count on at least one billion dollars in aid from official agencies to help fight communism. Three quarters of this, they said, would come from United States agencies.

The officials said the Latin Americas could obtain about 750 million dollars from the United States Export-Import Bank and 250 million dollars from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Parley Favors Government Press Subsidy

Geneva Switzerland, April 7 (AP). An Indian resolution in favor of permitting government subsidies for national news agencies was adopted 16 to 5 today at the United Nations Conference on Freedom of Information.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union opposed it.

Yugoslav Delegate Steven Dedijer attacked the three principal American news agencies as "powerful financial interests threatening the existence of national agencies in smaller countries."

Soviet Policy Blamed For 'Fear Psychosis'

Paris, April 7 (U.P.).—William Benton, chairman of the United States delegation to the Information Conference in Geneva, said today that if Russia had permitted free intercourse of ideas and information between its people and other countries, "the world would not now find itself in the grip of such an acute fear psychosis."

He attacked Soviet propaganda at a luncheon of the Anglo-American Press Association here.

Benton said that the Soviet Union was attending the Geneva conference mainly to create propaganda "to undermine freedom of expression in the world."

20 Monks Die in Fire

Shanghai, April 7 (AP).—The Chinese press today reported 20 Buddhist monks were burned to death after refusing to flee their flaming monastery.

Russia Easing Pressure in Trouble Spots

London, April 7 (AP).—Russia had western diplomats guessing tonight over the possibility of a temporary truce in Europe's cold war.

To encourage the speculation, there were rumors of Russian relaxation of her propaganda and signs of a let-up in her pressure.

Diplomats weighed these recent developments:

1. Sudden progressive Soviet concessions which have narrowed differences on an Austrian peace treaty.

2. The new Russian-Finnish friendship and military pact which proved more favorable to Finland than the western powers or the Finns had expected.

3. Apparent unwillingness of the Russians to force a clearcut showdown at Berlin.

4. Prague rumors that Moscow had advised the press of central and eastern Europe to soften its criticism of the United States and Britain.

Responsible British officials, while noting "the apparent trend," expressed the conviction any Soviet truce would prove temporary and offered no evidence of a shift in long-range Soviet ambitions.

Calvert Soil District Referendum April 20

College Park, Md., April 7 (AP). A special referendum on the proposed creation of a soil conservation district for Calvert County has been scheduled for April 30.

The step was announced today by Dr. T. B. Symons, chairman of the Maryland Soil Conservation Committee.

Calvert County in southern Maryland, Talbot County on the Eastern Shore are the only two counties in the State which have not ye organized a soil conservation district.

All persons who occupy land in Calvert—whether owners, lessees, tenants or renters—will be eligible to vote, Dr. Symons said.

Benes Extols 'Truth' in University Speech

Prague, Czechoslovakia, April 7 (U.P.).—President Eduard Benes, in his first public speech since the Communists took over Czechoslovakia, said today that only freedom and tolerance can bring "a truly happy future."

Not once, either in his speech or in a prepared statement read by Communist Minister of Education Zdenek Nejedly, did Benes mention the new political conditions.

In both speech and statement, however, he referred often to "truth" and "freedom."

Before the end of his three-minute address at ceremonies marking the 600th anniversary of Charles University, Benes' voice weakened and he appeared near collapse. Persons who stood near the 63-year-old President, said he seemed to have tears in his eyes.

Ambassadors Stay Away

Faltering in almost every word in the latter half of his speech, speaking with effort, Benes declared:

"Freedom, founded on man's respect for man and on common tolerance, and truth, which traditionally has had its home in our university, will, God willing, once more lead Charles University, and all of us with it, to happy prosperity and a truly happy future."

American Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt, the British Ambassador and the Dutch, Danish, Swedish and Norwegian Ministers "excused themselves" from attending the ceremonies, the Prague radio reported.

French Ambassador Maurice de Jean and top diplomats from the eastern European nations attended. Guards were posted at all entrances and a 50-man cordon stretched around the building.

In the speech, Benes declared: "Three years after the most terrible war in the history of humanity, there is between nations and states still no such peace as we wish for . . .

"If our natural human longing, accompanied by freedom of belief, science, thoughts and professions, is to be fulfilled, it is increasingly necessary to cultivate afresh and to bring into realization the universal freedom of the spirit which is the essential condition in every genuine spiritual life."

Hopes for Truth "Renewal"

In the statement Benes said, "the forces of free thought are seeking the truth, and nothing but the truth can break the chains.

"Truth is often renewed and ceremonially reconfirmed because, in time, it may naturally die or be criminally destroyed.

"Charles University," he added, "loyally and devotedly served the nation and saw its most reliable goal in freedom of the spirit and the upward surge of ideas seeking truth.

"Never—no matter how freely and powerfully its voice sounded, nor whether it was silenced or oppressed—did it lose for the Czech people the value of the unquenchable light of truth.

"The power of the clear and honest word . . . never perishes and . . . cannot perish," he said.

House Bill to Keep German Art in U.S. Is Introduced

Representative Claude I. Bakewell (R., Mo.) yesterday introduced in the House his companion bill to the measure of Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) to keep the 202 German art masterpieces at the National Gallery in this country until a German government is recognized.

The bills would authorize the gallery to send the art on a national exhibition tour of this country, with proceeds going to relief of German children. Yesterday, 18,085 more spectators viewed the art here, a total of 456,054 since the exhibit, opened March 17.

U. S. Asked to Move Vienna Installation

Order Against Army Radio Range Issued As Berlin Transit Curbs Are Tightened

By The Associated Press

The Russians demanded the removal of a United States Army installation from their zone of Austria yesterday as the Soviet command in Germany tightened measures to cut Berlin off from the West.

American authorities in Vienna disclosed the Soviets ordered the United States Army to move its radio range station from its present site in the Russian occupation zone. The range serves the Army's Tulln air base, five miles away and itself 14 miles deep in Russian territory.

An American spokesman said the demand did not indicate a worsening of four-power relations in Vienna as in Berlin. "The Russians have found a new way to be nasty to us," he said. United States sources said the Americans had agreed tentatively to move the station.

In Berlin the Russians extended their squeeze on Western power communications by blocking westbound mail shipments, including parcel post. United States military government officials said 57 freight cars loaded with parcel post were held at the Berlin post office because the Russians refused to attach the cars to outgoing trains.

It became apparent in Berlin that a hastening of the formation of a united western Germany opposed to communism might be the American-British-French answer to the Soviet boycott of four-power government in the German capital.

These developments marked the situation in Germany yesterday:

1. Britain made her first direct appeal to Germans to join the West under the Marshall Plan in opposition to the East, and to accept a divided Germany as inevitable for the time being.

2. Maurice Couve de Murville, ace French diplomatic negotiator on German affairs, arrived from Paris on Gen. Lucius D. Clay's private plane for a 3-day visit with the U. S. occupation commander. Possible merger of the French zone with the combined British-U. S. zones was held likely.

3. The possibility was revived that the Americans and British would escort their planes to Berlin with fighters.

Russia charged that a British transport, not a Soviet fighter plane, was entirely to blame for the death of 15 persons in the tragic air crash in Berlin Monday. The Soviet version was termed "palpably untrue" by British officials.

All four powers stood fast on their positions over traffic rights in and out of Berlin. The situation appeared deadlocked.

[A Russian source said Soviet Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky had advised the British that their protest against the collision of a Soviet fighter plane and a B. . transport was "slanderous and provocative," the United Press said.]

The Russians confirmed their announced intention of boycotting certain committees of the four-power government of the city by not attending the fuel supply and housing committees.

The Russians still had not set a time for discussion of the Berlin rail and highway restrictions.

Robertson Makes Speech

No softening effects were apparent from the dinner attended by Field Marshal Lord Montgomery of the British imperial general staff and Sokolovsky. Montgomery said his talk with Sokolovsky was "most friendly."

In a speech authoritatively stated to have the personal approval of British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, the British military governor, told the German state legislature at Dusseldorf:

"Come forward determined to make the best of that larger part of your country which is on the right side of the iron curtain.

"Make up your minds to stand against these gentlemen who, with democracy on their lips and truncheons behind their backs, would filch your German freedom from you."

Russian military authorities said last night they would abolish secret arrest and trial of Germans.

The controled Berlin radio said Marshal Sokolovsky had heard pleas by Communist leaders and had promised to reconsider the Russian arrest procedure.

Reds Claim Full Control Over Berlin Transit

Moscow, April 7 (NYHT).—The exclusive Soviet right to control transit between Berlin and the western zones of Germany was asserted in statement published here today. Tass, Soviet official news agency, said in a dispatch from Berlin that Russia does not recognize the right of the United States, Britain or France to have any say regarding who or what can move in or out of Berlin.

U. S. Protests Border Shots By Yugoslavs

By the United Press

The State Department disclosed yesterday that it has protested sharply to Yugoslavia over three border incidents in which Yugoslav troops fired into the Anglo-American zone of Trieste.

The American note denounced the acts as "provocative" and demanded there will be no repetition.

The first incident occurred last December 12, the second on March 22, and the latest on March 29, when two Yugoslav military police fired a number of rifle shots at a British observation post.

A Venezia-Giulia policeman was wounded by Yugoslav troops in the March 22 attack.

(At London, it was revealed that Britain also has protested to Yugoslavia against recent incidents on the border of Trieste.)

Only 10,000 Parade At Funeral of Trieste Red

Trieste, April 7 (U.P.).—Ten thousand Communists and sympathizers marched tonight without disorder in a public funeral for a Communist union leader who was killed in a street brawl last Saturday.

Engineered by Moscow-trained Communist agitator Vittorio Vidali who was deported from Mexico following the assassination of Trotsky, the mass funeral was one of the smallest Communist demonstrations of this type in Trieste.

Their turnout two years ago for a similar funeral was 50,000 and early last autumn, they mustered 25,000 for another.

Italians Sent 'Manifesto' of Peace, Hope

A "manifesto of peace to freedom-loving Italians" was sent to Italian Premier Alcide de Gasperi yesterday by a number of prominent Americans.

They included Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Herbert Lehman, former director general of UNRRA; E. R. Stettinius, former Secretary of State, and Henry L. Stimson and Robert P. Patterson, former Secretaries of War.

Sent as a message of encouragement to the people of Italy as Communists seek power in the April 18 elections, the manifesto said: "We believe that war can be avoided if the free peoples of the world will keep strong their democratic institutions by resisting all the sinister forces of intimidation which seek to destroy them from within."

Concluding, it said: "We Americans want the Italian people to know that we are with them wholeheartedly in their struggle to maintain their freedom and dignity in a world that is again darkened with the threat of oppression and slavery."

'Voice' Offers Italians 'Democracy' Essay Prizes

The State Department's "Voice of America" overseas broadcast yesterday arranged to carry details of how Italians could win prizes for essays on "How We Can Keep the Peace and Make Democracy Live."

The grand prize will be a farm tractor. The program also offers 250 wrist watches, 100 shirts, 100 pairs of shoes and 100 radio sets. The contest, under private sponsorship, is to last until May 7. American firms and individuals are donating the prizes.

[Unita followed with a report from Winston-Salem, N. C., that unionized tobacco workers there had sent a message to Italian workers that President Truman had asked Congress for power to invade Italy with the United States Army and take over the government if Communists win the election.

[The message said Truman headed an Administration committed to destroy unions and impose the Taft-Hartley Act by force of arms on Italy "as it is imposed on Greece, where the Truman Administration has imposed the death penalty for strikers."

[Unita concluded with a message reportedly from the CIO fur workers union expressing solidarity with the labor confederation and condemning American intervention in Italian elections.

[Key politicians deserted the Communist Party today in the Communist-dominated Emilia region of north Italy, Cassiano Bellasia, mayor of Rolo, and Luigi Nebriante, mayor of Bibbena, near Bologna, announced they had quit the Communist Party. Rank and file desertions of the leftist cause also were reported.

[The Foreign Office said it expected to conclude Saturday a ten-million-dollar trade deal to supply fruits and vegetables to Germany's American and British zones. The agreement will reopen a trade channel which took no less than 60 per cent of Italy's fruit and vegetable exports to Germany before the war.

[Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza said British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin had told him of a plan in which most of Europe will unite to develop the vast, unexploited regions of Africa, "in which Italy will participate with absolute equality and rights." Apparently this referred to parts of Africa not formerly under Italian rule.]

Jews Fight to Save Convoy for Tel Aviv

Reds to Veto Italy if U. N. Bars Friends

New York, April 7 (U.P.).—Russia served notice today she will veto United Nations membership applications of Italy and four other countries unless the western powers open the U. N. door to six pro-Soviet nations.

Soviet Delegate Andrei Gromyko outlined the Russian position at a private meeting of Big Five delegates to the U. N. Security Council.

The western powers promptly opposed admission of the Soviet bloc applicants and said they would press for quick Security Council action.

This left the big powers precisely where they were late last summer in the fight over which countries shall be admitted to the organization.

It appeared that early next week Russia will use her veto in the Security Council to block admission of Italy, Trans-Jordan, Ireland, Portugal and Austria while the western powers blackball Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria, Finland, Albania and Outer Mongolia.

Arab Guns Blast Northern Palestine Colony for 3d Day

Jerusalem, April 7 (AP).—Jewish sources in Tel Aviv said 1500 Haganah soldiers were battling Arab forces tonight in a desperate attempt to get a Jewish convoy through from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv.

This new battle along the Jerusalem-Tel Aviv convoy route came as Arabs blasted away with artillery at the colony of Mishmar Haemek in northern Palestine in the first offensive by an Arab army against outlying Jewish settlements.

The Mishmar Haemek battle was in its third day. The Jews were behind pillbox fortifications and in underground refuges in the colony. Casualty figures obtained from both sides said five Jews were killed and 11 wounded and one Arab slightly injured thus far.

British Evacuate Nonparticipants

Mishmar Haemek's 300 women and children were evacuated to other colonies today by the Third Hussars of the British Sixth Airborne Division. About 200 men have been added to the normal 400-man Haganah defense strength of the colony, Mayor Arieh Diamond said.

Although the issue was still in doubt, Fawzi Bey Al Kaukji, commander of the Yarmuk army, addressed this ultimatum: "Surrender, or we wipe you out."

Jewish informants said the new road battle centered around a convoy trying to break through to the west on the heels of the success two days ago of getting an eastbound convoy into Jerusalem.

They said the convoy had fought its way halfway between the Haganah-held village of Kastel, 5 miles west of Jerusalem, and the deadly sniper trap in the gorge of Bab al Wad.

British troops surrounded the Jewish settlement of El Yishuv, south of Haifa, and were reported threatening to shell it unless the Jews surrender their arms.

The move was believed linked with the Jewish attack on a near-by British army camp yesterday in which the commander and six British soldiers were killed.

Irgun Zvai Leumi, Jewish underground group, said it was responsible for the attack on the camp.

[Official but fragmentary reports to the United Press reported an Arab incursion in north Palestine with Syrian-uniformed troops swarming down into the Hula Plains.

[The Arabs were reported to have concentrated on the Jewish settlement of Lehovat-Habasham. Before dawn, they blew up the Tel El-Kadi bridge to prevent Haganah reinforcements from aiding the beleaguered Jews. The Arabs then attacked under cover of heavy automatic weapons and mortar fire, according to reports. Haganahites marched all last night to reach the settlement.]

1200 Guerillas Kill 7 Greeks, Kidnap 67

Athens, April 7 (U.P.).—American sources reported today that an estimated 1200 guerillas attacked an American Aid Mission road construction project in east central Greece Monday and Tuesday, killed five Greek soldiers and two civilians and kidnaped 67 persons, including 17 mission truck drivers.

The rebel force suddenly swarmed down and burned or dynamited American trucks, road-rollers and graders near Pharsala on the Athens-Salonika road.

Reports said the battle raged all night, with villagers coming to the aid of project workers.

Press dispatches said Greek air force planes pounded the rebels as they fled southward and that one Spitfire was shot down.

Dispatches from Jannina in northwest Greece said the first phase of the Mourgana Mountain operation was concluded and guerillas had been driven off all but a very narrow strip of territory on the Albanian border.

In Salonika, 13 more guerillas, including two girls, were executed for participating in the rebel shelling of that city.

Police Battle Cairo Hospital Orderlies

Cairo, Egypt, April 7 (U.P.).—Striking orderlies and sympathizing medical students fought police from a hospital roof today, spreading panic among the patients.

Twenty strikers and five policemen were injured and 200 of the strikers were arrested.

The clash followed two days of riots in Alexandria and Cairo precipitated by a police strike.

An estimated 1000 orderlies and other attendants at Kasr el Eini Hospital, one of the city's biggest, on the banks of the Nile, struck today for increased wages.

The government sent 500 police on foot, 100 mounted police and 3 fire brigades. The strikers climbed stairways to the roof and showered down stones and boiling water, police said.

Police pitched tear gas bombs onto the roof and fired warning shots in the air. Then an estimated 500 medical students joined in from their annex. At the end of an hour police rushed the hospital under cover of machine gun fire.

When the shooting started some patients locked themselves in closets or threw themselves under their beds.

Doctors delivered two babies in the women's ward when the fight spread to the delivery room. Some of the strikers tried to hide in or under the beds or in the closets with the patients.

The battle ended by midafternoon with the arrest of the strikers.

Arab, Jewish Truce Views Given to U. N.

New York, April 7 (AP).—Arab and Jewish representatives gave their views on a Palestine truce today to the United Nations Security Council president.

Dr. Alfonso Lopez of Colombia, head of the council this month, talked with them secretly for more than three and one-half hours. He said the conversations probably would continue Thursday.

Dr. Lopez exacted an agreement from the Jewish and Arab leaders not to discuss the meeting.

Jamal el Husseini, vice chairman of the Arab higher committee, sat for the Arabs. Moshe Shertok, head of the Jewish agency for Palestine, represented the Jews.

Lopez said both parties sat at the same table for a brief period at the beginning. Then, he said, he talked individually with both.

Earlier delegates of the Security Council talked over the truce proposal and a United States plan for a Palestine trusteeship.

Vassily A. Tarasenko of the Soviet Ukraine sat in but had no comment.

U. N. Told of $6 Million Palestine Food Need

Lake Success, N. Y., April 7.—The British told the United Nations Palestine commission today that someone other than Britain will have to guarantee about six million dollars within the next week or 10 days to keep Palestine properly fed up to June 30.

The commission decided to send an emergency report to the Security Council.

The British estimate was to cover only the period between May 15, when the British mandate is formally to be terminated, and June 30.

The British refused the commission's appeal to advance British funds for the food buying.

Economic Council Asks Inflation Curbs

By The Associated Press

Once more a presidential commission advised the Nation yesterday to get inflation controls ready.

The need is greater than it was three months ago, members of President Truman's Council of Economic Advisers told reporters after they handed him their quarterly report.

Chairman Edwin G. Nourse said the council believes rationing and wage-price control powers should be set up and applied selectively as they are needed. President Truman asked for similar power months ago.

There was no sign that Congress is in a mood to agree. Before the report was delivered, Chairman Wolcott (R., Mich.) of the House Banking Committee told reporters he sees no immediate need for reviving curbs.

The economic council's report was not made public. That is up to the President. It will be reviewed Friday by the Cabinet. Nourse declined details.

Nourse indicated in advance the report touched on a wider range of subjects than usual, including probable impact of rearmament moves under the United States "stop-Russia" policiy.

As additional inflationary pressures, Nourse cited: the $4,800,000,000 tax reduction Congress voted over Mr. Truman's veto; and the proposed additional defense expenditures of three billion dollars or more. He also mentioned the European Recovery Program, dealt with in an earlier report.

Nourse said he sees no immediate need for broad, war-types of control.

U. S. Witness In Trial of Best Ill With Mumps

Boston, April 7 (AP).—A key witness through whose testimony the Government seeks to prove seven overt acts of treason was still confined to a hospital with mumps tonight as the prosecution's evidence neared completion in the trial of Robert H. Best.

Tom de Wolfe, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, said he expected to complete his case by noon tomorrow—save for the testimony of Edward Sittler, one-time associate of Best's in Germany.

Sittler was employed by the German broadcasting company at the time Best allegedly made his war-time broadcasts in behalf of the Nazi cause.

FRESH BLOOD A MUST FOR FREE ENERGY
Do you feel like you are tied to a drag everytime you try to do something? If so, don't let a low blood count hold you down when you may release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.
Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.
To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that S.S.S. Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the S.S.S. Tonic formula, which contains special and potent activating ingredients.
Also, S.S.S. Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.
Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on S.S.S. Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. S.S.S. Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Drive Is Launched in Both Houses to Pass Taft-Ellender-Wagner Housing Measure

A determined drive to put the Taft-Ellender-Wagner long-range housing bill through Congress this session shaped up in both Houses of Congress yesterday.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee yesterday approved, 7 to 6, a series of amendments to incorporate recommendations of the Joint Congressional Housing Committee into the bill. The committee voted to retain its public housing features.

On the House side, 114 signatures have been obtained for a petition to bring the housing measure to the floor. It is now pigeon-holed by the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Representative Helan Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.), who introduced the discharge petition, said she believed proponents of housing would be as successful in obtaining the necessary 218 signatures as those who supported the oleomargarine bill.

"There are substitutes for oleo but there is no substitute for a home," Mrs. Douglas said.

Mrs. Douglas said she had been informed the Senate is likely to pass the housing measure in the next 10 days.

Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) who introduced the committee amendments to the housing measure said he was reasonably sure the Senate Republican leadership would call for action on the housing bill "at an early date."

The Senate Republican Policy Committee, however, has not yet discussed the housing bill or its place on the legislative program.

Under the Flanders' amendments the Title VI mortgage insurance provision would be extended to April 30, 1949, with two billion dollars authorized for such loans. Title VI expires at the end of this month under a temporary 30-day extension recently voted by Congress.

The bill will also provide for a guaranteed minimum return on rental housing not to exceed 2¾ per cent a year on the outstanding investment of private capital.

In Rent Rise Row

Truman May Withdraw Woods' Name

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The White House is considering withdrawing the nomination of Tighe E. Woods as Federal Housing Expediter and Rent Control Administrator, The Washington Post learned last night.

Woods, former deputy Housing expediter, succeeded Frank R. Creedon last fall. He was recently nominated by President Truman to administer the 1948 rent control law. The nomination is still before a Senate Banking and Currency Subcommittee.

The White House has been given well-documented evidence that Woods has been following 'he advice of Senator Harry Cain (R., Wash.), an admitted foe of rent control.

Woods' order yesterday that Bremerton, Wash., be decontrolled as of April 8 was made after Cain had exerted great pressure on the Rent Control Administrator, the White House was told.

Protests against the nomination have continued to mount for many weeks.

Some of the protests were sparked by Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO president and chairman of the CIO National Housing Committee, while others have come from individual members of Congress whose districts are being affected by decisions of the Rent Control Administrator.

Harvey Brown, president of the International Association of Machinists, yesterday demanded withdrawal of the nomination.

Representatives Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) and David M. Potts (R., N. Y.) have demanded a congressional investigation of Woods' approval of 12 per cent rent hikes in low-cost housing projects in New York.

Siamese Military Ask Premier to Resign

Bangkok, Siam, April 7 (AP).—Siamese military leaders called on Premier Khuang Aphiwong last night to resign.

Leaders of the bloodless coup last November—which was headed by Marshal Pibul Songgram—told the Premier his government is unsatisfactory.

The Premier called a cabinet meeting this morning to decide on a possible new government, but the ministers dispersed soon after arriving.

The coup leaders seek a coalition government.

Divorce Won As Sequel to Historic Suit

London, April 7 (AP).—Childless Mrs. Gwendoline Rosina Baxter was granted a divorce today in a quiet sequel to a historic House of Lords decision that constant use of contraceptives does not nullify a marriage.

Mrs. Baxter won the conditional divorce decree on the grounds that her husband had deserted. The husband, Charles Frederick Baxter, did not contest.

Previously, Baxter had sued unsuccessfully for nullification of the marriage on the grounds that his wife's insistence on the use of contraceptives amounted to willful refusal to consummate the marriage.

The Lords refused his appeal, ruling that intercourse consummated the marriage with or without contraceptives. The Baxters had been married since January, 1934.

Eastern Railroads Ask Fare Rise

New York, April 7 (AP).—Eastern railroads today asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to increase passenger fares approximately one-half cent a mile.

The proposed new scale is 3 cents a mile for one-way coach fares, which are now 2½ cents on virtually all Eastern roads, and 4 cents a mile for one-way Pullman fares, which currently are 3½ cents on all Eastern lines.

Proportionate increases were asked for round-trip and multiple rate fares. Commutation rates are not affected by the petition.

The Eastern Railroad Presidents' Conference said operating costs have been increased by at least 400 million dollars annually since the present fares were authorized in the spring of 1947.

Last year's passenger service operations, the conference added, resulted in the greatest deficit ever experienced.

The Eastern railroads said in announcing the application that passenger service operations after showing wartime profits reverted to their prewar loss status after abnormal traffic subsided and costs continued to increase.

Truckers to Seek New Law on Weight Limits

Carlisle, Pa., April 7 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Motor Truck Association today said it planned to carry to the 1949 Legislature a fight to increase the State's freight truck weight limits.

McCabe Approved For Reserve Board

Hearing Confirmed

Thomas Asks House to Back Condon Stand

The House Committee on Un-American Activities yesterday asked full House backing for its demand for the letter from FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover relating to the loyalty of Dr. Edward O. Condon, director of the Bureau of Standards.

Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J., introduced a House resolution calling upon Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman to turn over the Hoover letter.

The resolution, approved by eight of the nine-member Un-American Activities Committee, was referred to the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

The Un-American Activities group has been feuding with Secretary Harriman for several weeks over the Secretary's refusal to hand over the full letter which Hoover wrote last May 1 to Harriman on an investigation of Condon.

Original Hearing Date Holds

On the advice of Attorney General Tom C. Clark, Harriman rejected the committee's demand for the letter on the ground it would be prejudicial to the public interest.

President Truman then ordered Government officials to refuse all congressional demands of loyalty records on Federal employes.

The committee has termed Condon "one of the weakest links in atomic security," in a report released by Thomas. Condon demanded that public hearings be held on the charges.

Thomas said yesterday the committee would go ahead as scheduled with hearings on April 21, or even before. Monday, Thomas had stated the hearings might have to be deferred because committee members would have to testify in the contempt trials here of 10 Hollywood motion picture figures.

To Introduce Communist Check

Thomas expressed the belief that if the House adopts his resolution, Secretary Harriman will release the Hoover letter to the committee.

The situation has the possibility of a prolonged head-on conflict between the executive and legislative branches.

The House committee will introduce a bill Friday directed at curbing activities of Communists within the United States. One provision of the measure is a requirement that all Communist-front organizations be registered with the Department of Justice and that their literature etc. must be plainly marked "Communist-front."

The Attorney General would be required to designate all organizations which he finds subversive and the organizations would have the right of court appeal.

Hits Spy Law Enforcement

Thomas lashed out at Clark yesterday as having been "very lax" in enforcing antiespionage laws.

His comment was made after the Justice Department had called for tighter spy laws. The department said the existing espionage act permits foreign agents to send certain types of military information abroad without fear of information.

Senate Committee Backs Appointment Of Philadelphian

McCabe

The appointment of Thomas B. McCabe, Philadelphia banker and industrialist, to the Federal Reserve Board was recommended by the Senate Banking Committee yesterday.

McCabe is President Truman's choice for chairman of the board to succeed Marriner S. Eccles. Eccles, if McCabe's appointment is approved by the Senate, will become vice chairman.

The committee's recommendation was made after extended hearings, touched off by a blast by Committee Chairman Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) a close friend of Eccles. Tobey declared he wished to know what "force" prompted Mr. Truman to demote Eccles.

Three voted against the recommendation, according to Tobey, who said they were himself and Senators Fulbright (D., Ark.) and Taylor (D., Idaho).

At the hearings, Tobey charged that McCabe had mismanaged the sale of surplus Army property in China while serving as Foreign Liquidation Administrator for the State Department.

The hearings revealed that President Truman has consulted Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder on McCabe's appointment. Snyder, however, assured the committee that he knew nothing about plans for McCabe to be made chairman—that he was consulted only on his appointment to the board.

One To Go

The Senate effectively disposed of the attempts to block daylight-saving time Tuesday by voting, 46-17, to permit the District Commissioners to establish fast time here each summer. We have no doubt that daylight saving is sought, as Senator Overton said in his effort to spike it, by "aristocrats" and "retired capitalists." It is also sought by a lot of other people, as evidenced by polls and the support of many civic groups. Whatever the plausible arguments against daylight saving, the contention that it violates "God's time" is not among them. In any case, the question of moving clocks ahead each spring is essentially a concern of the people of Washington, not of senatorial constituents in Louisiana, and we are glad that the Senate recognized this in vesting authority in the Commissioners. We hope now that the House District Committee will get a hustle on and report out the companion bill for a vote so that preparations can be made for changing over to daylight saving on April 25.

Defending Finland

On its face, the Soviet-Finnish Mutual Aid Treaty seems to advance the reciprocal advantage and security of the two nations and thus to contribute to the cause of world peace. If it were not for the domineering tendencies of her new ally and the sense of pressure under which negotiations for the alliance were initiated, Finland could now be congratulated on having obtained a powerful protector in case she should become the victim of aggression from the west. The fact that her western neighbors have no aggressive designs did not broaden Finland's choice in the matter. She is now as secure—that is, from the west—as the mighty Red army can make her.

The treaty is exemplary in its recognition of and respect for Finland's sovereignty. It takes into account "Finland's desire to stand aside from contradictions between the interests of great powers." It obligates Finland to fight only on her own soil and "to rebuff aggression" only if it is aimed at her directly or at the Soviet Union across her territory. It invites the "assistance" of the Soviet Union only "in the event of necessity . . . on the rendering of which the parties will reach mutual agreement." And it piously asserts that "the realization of the present treaty will be in accord with the principles of the United Nations organization."

One wonders, of course, why the Russians wanted this alliance. They already possess bases in the Porkkala, Hangoe and Petsamo districts which afford, one would think, ample protection for Leningrad and the northern approaches to the Soviet Union. And certainly the Russian peace treaty with Finland was so arranged, apart from consideration of the relative strength of the two countries, that Finland could neither attack the USSR nor defend herself against attack from that quarter. The explanation must lie in the Russian phobia about capitalist imperialism. When one is fearful, there is no end to the locking and bolting of doors. If the new alliance serves to make the Russians feel any more secure from the fantasies that frighten them, it may even have a certain usefulness. So far as Finland is concerned, the acceptance of the treaty, especially in view of the concessions made to Finnish integrity and independence, is altogether understandable. Indeed, the Finns stood up much better than was generally expected on this side of the iron curtain.

Justice For Nisei

The Japanese-Americans who were evacuated from the West Coast in the emergency of 1941 and detained during the war in "relocation centers" suffered serious property losses as a result. It was not their fault that they were evacuated. They had committed no crime; not a single attempt at espionage or sabotage was ever officially attributed to them. But in the hysteria that succeeded the attack on Pearl Harbor, the military commander in charge of the defense of the West Coast decided that it would be safer to have them in the interior of the country. They were forced to dispose of homes and business interests in haste and in many instances at great sacrifice; some of them lost everything that they had owned in the way of worldly goods.

These people have sought no redress for the humiliation to which they were subjected, or for the trespass on their constitutional rights as American citizens. But manifestly, as a matter of elementary justice, they are entitled to compensation for material losses incurred through no fault of their own. A bill for establishment of an evacuation claims commission which would determine the compensation due them was introduced in 1946. It was reported favorably to both House and Senate in the Seventy-ninth Congress and passed the latter body unanimously but reached the former too late for floor consideration prior to adjournment. In the present Congress, the House has approved the bill but the Senate has not yet acted. It would be a great misfortune if it were allowed to lapse again through carelessness or on account of the pressure of other business. There appears to be no question as to the desirability and justice of this legislation. Delay in enacting it can serve only to perpetuate a wrong and to aggravate the injuries which these loyal Americans have endured.

Contempt

To date the coal strike has been the story of a surly and cantankerous bully thumbing his nose at the Nation. If John L. Lewis were an ordinary citizen, his insolent and arbitrary conduct could be overlooked as of no public consequence. But he happens to be a powerful dictator in one of the country's basic industries. His nose thumbing has cost the United States 47 million tons of coal. And if the strike continues into next week, as now appears certain, the Nation's railroads and factories will be going out of action at a rate that can be thought of only in terms of disaster.

The extent of the crippling power exerted by the United Mine Workers chieftain may be seen in the order of yesterday to cut both passenger and freight traffic on coal-burning railroads to one half of normal next week. By the middle of next week, Secretary Krug has estimated, 36 per cent of the Nation's power plants, 56 per cent of its steel and rolling mills, 36 per cent of its cement mills and 43 per cent of other industries will be shut down for want of fuel or power. And this comes at a time when the United States has pledged itself to strain its resources and productive capacity to aid friendly peoples in western Europe whose freedom is in danger.

It is not, of course, a case of the United Mine Workers against the coal operators. That case receded into the background when the President's emergency board brought in its report and the Federal District Court in Washington issued an injunction against continuation of the strike. The board found that "their stoppage has precipitated a crisis in the industry and in the Nation as a whole." The President added that the "national health and safety" were imperiled. In the face of that grave situation, the court invoked the law enacted only last year by Congress in an effort to meet precisely such a national calamity. It is now a case of John Lewis against the United States and the national welfare and security.

In these circumstances the Department of Justice exercised great restraint in waiting until Wednesday to ask that Mr. Lewis be summoned into court to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt. Thousands of citizens who are left idle through no fault of their own, who are stranded for want of transportation or cold for want of fuel will say that his contempt is flagrant and malicious. Aside from its grave economic and international effects, it tends to make a mockery of government by law. To reasonable-minded citizens who wish to get on with the business of recovery and to meet our commitments as a people worthy of trust, this blind and irrational obstruction will seem the more inexcusable because it repeats Mr. Lewis' performance of only a year and a half ago when he and the UMW were heavily fined for contempt of court in a similar case of open defiance.

In a democracy there is no substitute, of course, for slow judicial action. We must again wait for the courts to go through the motions of hearing arguments, trying a contempt case and finally imposing the national will on the recalcitrants. Even when that is done, Mr. Lewis will be free in 80 days to begin his sabotage tactics all over again. We think the people are thoroughly sick of this periodic holdup of industry and defiance of Government. If Congress does not provide a more effective remedy, it will invite either anarchy on one hand or police-state methods on the other to the great detriment of our economy as well as our standing in the world.

Code Of Fair Inquiry

Congressman George H. Bender's Subcommittee of the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments has made a commendable start toward the control of congressional hearings by specific and ascertainable rules. In response to the "valid criticism" of congressional investigations by the press and members of Congress, this subcommittee has adopted a set of rules by which all of its future hearings will be guided. Its admirable purpose is not only to insure orderly hearings but also to give witnesses confidence that they will be treated fairly and that their testimony will not be distorted. We are especially pleased to learn that the subcommittee was encouraged to take this step by our recent series of editorials on congressional investigations under the title "Turning On The Light."

All hearings of this subcommittee will be open to the public, except when an executive session is ordered by majority vote, and no witness will be examined in executive session unless at least two members of the subcommittee and one member of the staff is present. This rule does not go far enough, in our opinion, but it offers much more protection to witnesses than some committees have granted in the past. A stenographic record of all testimony will be made and transcripts will be available to interested persons at cost. If any part of the testimony taken in executive session is disclosed by the subcommittee, the entire record will be made public. Here is a significant safeguard against the use of selected half-truths for smearing purposes.

Witnesses will be permitted to have their lawyers present, and the lawyers may advise witnesses whether to answer any question. Every witness will be permitted to have his say, within limits. He may file a "sworn relevant statement" that will become part of the record and read aloud a summary of it before the subcommittee, although this is predicated upon having the statement and summary filed with the subcommittee four days before the hearing is scheduled. Persons defamed or affected by any statement before the subcommittee may also submit relevant sworn statements for the record. The committee reserves the right to put all such statements in concise form. Unfortunately, no right of presenting questions to character-defaming witnesses is recognized. It is a disappointment also that the subcommittee eliminated a proposal which would have barred questions as to witnesses' race, or their religious or political beliefs.

We hope that other congressional committees will follow the lead of the Bender subcommittee and at the same time expand the scope of these initial rules. The effect would be to put increasing pressure upon the committees that operate without regard for any code of fair procedure and substitute smearing for unbiased disclosure of information. It is quite evident, however, that rules imposed by individual committees upon themselves are not the final answer. To avoid confusion and subject all congressional inquiries to standards that the best committees adhere to by custom, a code of fair conduct for all investigating groups should be adopted by the House and Senate themselves.

Stassen's Wisconsin

Harold Stassen's impressive victory in the Wisconsin Republican presidential primary does more than eclipse the boom for General MacArthur and chill the prospects of Governor Dewey. The most significant implication in the 19-8 division of delegates between Stassen and MacArthur, with Dewey entirely squeezed out, is that isolationism in Wisconsin is a dead or dying horse. No prominent Republican presidential aspirant has been more consistently world-minded than Harold Stassen. By the same token, though little was known of General MacArthur's personal views, his supporters included a strange coterie of America Firsters and La Follette Progressives following a strong isolationist cant. If the primary indicates nothing else, it shows that the traditional Middle Western heart of isolationism is isolationist no longer.

It would be a mistake to regard the Wisconsin results as an objective test of national strength. The outcome may, of course, remove MacArthur from the running, for Wisconsin was widely advertised as his "home territory." But the MacArthur boom had a synthetic appearance and was never taken very seriously. Wisconsin is too close to Stassen's home State of Minnesota for the former Minnesota Governor's showing there to be projected on a national scale. Likewise, though Dewey's poor third will not enhance his chances, his hold over the New York delegation makes him still a formidable contender for the nomination.

What the Stassen victory may do is make the party regulars sit up and take notice. To be sure, Stassen himself is a party regular in the sense that he has worked within the GOP and made use of its machinery. However, he has been regarded by the bosses as more of an irritant than a challenger to be taken seriously. It cannot be doubted that Stassen derived considerable help from the support given him by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy. Nevertheless, there was a refreshingly grassroots air about Stassen's approach. As a Wisconsin correspondent points out in a letter in an adjacent column, Stassen carried the issues to the voters through open forums and by personal letters. His appeal obviously got results. The outcome was a marked contrast to that in 1944, when Wendell Willkie, enunciating a program not dissimilar to Stassen's, withdrew as a presidential contender after most of the Wisconsin delegates went to Governor Dewey.

Up until now, some political observers have counted Stassen out as a major contender, postulating that he might throw his weight to insure a deadlock between Governor Dewey and Senator Taft and then accept second place on a ticket headed by Senator Vandenberg. Stassen's present showing may force a revision of these predictions. It also raises the possibility of a stop-Stassen combination of Dewey and Taft forces. The next test will be in the Nebraska primary on Tuesday. Here a Taft victory would not be overly surprising, since Mr. Taft has the aid of Senator Hugh Butler; in 1946 Butler scored a resounding triumph over Gov. Dwight Griswold, a Stassen supporter. If, however, Stassen should win in Nebraska, there would be little doubt that his star is well in the ascendancy.

THE FIDDLER

When old Jake Cogler played the fiddle
It didn't sound like a fiddle at all:
Strange tunes came from that wooden thing,
Strange, far voices seemed to call.

He made the motions, he moved his bow,
But nothing was mellow, nothing peace:
Something prisoned there cried in longing,
Something shrieked for its release.

And Jake himself knew something was wrong,
But he fiddled his jigs on just the same,
As a man who whistled and saw before him
What wild thing from the forest came
With terrible eyes and flaming breath,
And under its hoofs the sound of Death . . .

Wisconsin Primary

Editor's Note: The following letter, written before Tuesday's primary, is published because of the light it throws on the Stassen victory.

Because the implications of the Wisconsin presidential preference primary election are generally misunderstood elsewhere, and are not clearly understood by all the voters in Wisconsin, it should be explained that this election serves a double purpose—not only to express the voter's preference among those presidential candidates who are entered, but also to determine the leadership of the party in the State of Wisconsin for the next four years.

Most voters probably vote solely for the presidential candidate, but a very substantial number of them bear in mind the political implications involved in electing one slate of delegates rather than another.

For example, a vote for the MacArthur slate might be cast as much to help the comeback of some former Progressives in Republican Party affairs as to help the general on his way home, and a vote for Stassen may be the result of some feeling, one way or the other, about Senator McCarthy and his supporters, who are Stassen delegates.

Notable in this campaign have been the use by the Stassen people of the personalized direct-mail techniques so effectively used by Senator McCarthy in his previous campaigns for office—individualized letters to lists of Wisconsin voters, such as a letter to educators from former President Coffey of the University of Minnesota, and last-minute personal letters over Stassen's own signature to what must be entire lists of registered voters.

Notable also has been the exceptionally effective use of the open forum technique by Governor Stassen, in handling questions directly from audiences—a clear and accurate restatement of the question, followed by a forthright answer to it.

Four years ago the results of the Wisconsin presidential primary were nationally interpreted as a rejection of the Willkie candidacy; it was also true that the Willkie delegates were amateurs in party politics, participating in party affairs for the first time because of personal conviction that an international approach to national problems was necessary, and that election of these delegates would have displaced most of the regular Republican organization men who were listed in 1944 as Dewey delegates.

The refusal of most of the Dewey delegates to withdraw, at Dewey's request, in 1944 indicates the importance, in their eyes, at least, of election and subsequent influence in party affairs.

This year more such party leaders are on the Stassen slate, fewer on Dewey's.

In any case, an adequate understanding of the Wisconsin election on April 6 involves a good deal more than a simple tabulation of the number of delegates elected, or even of the votes cast for the separate slates.

Perverted Language

Your March 30 editorial, "Lewis' Gobbledegook," is a salutary reflection on the current deterioration of language as a tool of thought. The mine leader's verbal legerdemain is paralleled by the President's recent statement on Palestine, which moved Dorothy Thompson to observe: "If read carefully, it means nothing." In the January issue of The Times of London Literary Supplement, that last refuge of a cultured journalism, the editor deplores the indiscriminate use of such terms as "Christian values, Western civilization," etc., by those who champion a way of life no longer confined to the Christian or Western world. These examples demonstrate that the perversion of words, through ignorance or by intent, is nowadays lamentably common.

The decline of an exact and felicitous application of language is not an accident. For speech is a living, changing thing, tremulous and sensitive to every wayward wind of doctrine. Its social significance as a barometer registering the health and decay of the body politic was noted even in pre-Biblical antiquity. Long before the admonition to "beware of scribes and Pharisees," Aechines hectored an Athenian audience, in 326 B. C., with the charge that Demosthenes neglected the manly arts of hunting and war to cultivate the blandishments of a deceptive rhetoric. And wasn't it Oscar Wilde who remarked that "the fact that a man is a poisoner is nothing against his style?"

The deliberate adulteration of language in the interests of obscurantism has a fascinating, if sinister, history. From L. C. Jebb's exhaustive and absorbing study, The Attic Orators, we gather that the demagogues of old had little to learn from the psychological warriors of contemporary totalitarianism; and that these rabble-rousers are symptomatic of the waning influence of once-virile political systems. The rise of inspired liars like Mussolini and Goebbels marked the decay of representative government in Italy and Germany. Similarly, the tired hacks who mouth the windy platitudes of the party line serve but to record the long night and prevailing power of Stalinism. But, subtle or clumsy, the influence of these perverts of the word is auxiliary, never decisive.

Ruhland's "Paupers"

If Dr. George C. Ruhland is "irritated" and "fuming" at the refusal of the 10 women patients of Freedmen's Hospital to go where they are told, this writer's feelings are more than that. I find his statement "I can't understand why paupers won't go where they're told to go," positively vomitive.

Is it necessary to call these tubercular persons "paupers"? The dictionary defines the word as a very poor person, especially one who is supported by the public or by charity. I admit that the majority of tuberculous patients are charitably and publicly supported. It is public duty that the health of our citizens be guarded. Even a person of moderate means must lean on charitable or public agencies to aid them during an illness such as T. B. Because of the length of convalescence and no self-earnings during that time (possibly a year or more), the expense involved is great and the average person's bank account can become totally depleted. Therefore, a tuberculous patient is not necessarily a very poor person. Dr. Ruhland's word is not very well chosen. SELMA STEINER.

Drive On Communism

There has been a great deal said about the Voice of America and selling democracy to foreign countries, with which I thoroughly agree, but I wonder if we should not be putting on a planned and active campaign against communism here at home.

All this agitation about racial segregation is evidently the result of a drive or concerted action by certain organizations to bring about strife, dissension and possibly revolution. Why does not our Government promote organized propaganda to counteract such activities in this country? It seems to me it would be well to launch an educational program, by means of the lecture platform and radio, to educate the Negro to the fact that he is being exploited by certain organizations and individuals, not for the best interest of the Negro but for the cause of communism. Illegality Of Finnish-Soviet Alliance

May I call the attention of your readers to articles 13, 14 and 34 of the Finnish peace treaty signed in Paris on February 10, 1947? These articles seem to preclude the conclusion of a Finnish-Soviet military alliance.

Article 13 says: "The maintenance of land, sea and air armaments shall be closely restricted to meeting tasks of an internal character and local defense of frontiers." Then follow the stipulations which limit Finland's armed forces to a land army, including frontier troops and antiaircraft artillery of not more than 34,400 men, to a navy with a personnel strength of 4500 men and to an air force including any naval arm with a personnel of not more than 3000 men. That makes a total of 41,900 men.

According to Article 14, all personnel of the Finnish armed forces in excess of the strength permitted under Article 13, "shall be disbanded within six months from the coming into force of the present treaty."

It is difficult to see how a government whose so small armed forces are restricted "to meeting tasks of an internal character" could be forced into a military alliance with the greatest land power on earth without being forced to violate Article 13 of a peace treaty among the contracting parties of which also are the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada, India, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa.

Special attention should be given to Article 34, which reads:

"1. For a period not to exceed 18 months from the coming into force of the present treaty, the heads of the diplomatic missions in Helsinki of the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom, acting in concert, will represent the Allied and Associated Powers in dealing with the Finnish government in all matters concerning the execution and interpretation of the present treaty.

"2. The two heads of mission will give the Finnish government such guidance, technical advice and clarification as may be necessary to insure the rapid and efficient execution of the present treaty both in letter and in spirit.

"3. The Finnish government shall afford the said two heads of mission all necessary information and any assistance which they may require for the fulfillment of the tasks devolving on them under the present treaty."

The Finnish peace treaty came into force on September 15, 1947, at 8 p. m. Therefore, the 18-month period prescribed in Article 34 will not come to an end before March 15, 1949.

These facts should enable the British government to protest the conclusion of the Finnish-Soviet military pact as violating the aforementioned articles, not only in its own name but also in the name of Australia, Canada, India, New Zealand and South Africa, that is, in the name of 60 per cent of the signatory powers of the Finnish peace treaty. New Threat Of Inflation

By Malvina Lindsay

Price Preparedness

THE AVERAGE family that had been hoping to live a little more easily as it saw prices of a few goods beginning to weaken now is bracing itself for a "here we go again" ride. What is to be its next move if defense expenditures, abetted by lowered taxes and the foreign recovery program, start the cost of living zooming again? Will it draw in its horns or start panic buying for fear prices will go still higher?

Since most families and individuals are living too close to the margin under present inflation to do much panic buying, the answer for them promises to be more self-denial. Upper income groups may splurge or hoard some with the windfalls they receive through the split income provision of the tax bill. This may possibly help some depressed markets, as furs, textiles, furniture. But the nine tenths of families with incomes below $5000 a year will have to find more corners to cut.

True, nearly everyone will have a few more dollars to spend as a result of tax reduction. But in the lower brackets that won't buy much meat, which a prolonged packing house strike might make scarcer and still higher. Meat, eggs, milk and butter are taking the bulk of the food dollar. And food is the major expense of the average wage earner.

BEFORE THE present war scare and launching of the new three billion-dollar defense program, a definite retrenchment pattern was developing among all groups, even including millionaires. And that despite the fact that 15 million more people than before the war were getting pay checks. Not only was the luxury spending spree ended, but families were cutting down on milk for their children—as decreased sales showed.

An economy wave was sweeping over the bulk of consumers, and an attitude of "Wait and see if prices won't break" was growing among those who could afford to spend. Mothers were wearing old clothes so daughter could have new outfits. Fathers were making suits do another year. The public was beginning to restrain itself even on candy bars and soft drinks. Shoppers were crowding bargain basements. Women were sewing their own garments, baking their own cookies.

In the grocery stores housewives were pinching pennies, buying more cheese and spaghetti, less higher priced cuts of meat, less bakery products and preserves. Those who could not make pay checks cover budgets were cashing bonds, borrowing, buying on installment, beginning to defer bills. Roving Congressmen holding hearings on living costs last summer heard these families' hard luck stories.

THEN, IN recent weeks, came signs that things might "adjust." The break in the commodity market brought food prices down a little. There were reports supply was catching up in some fields, also that consumer resistance was causing some high-priced products to "soften." Housewives were trying to outwait dealers in electric appliances; some consumers had put off buying furniture, clothes, shoes.

But now another war-geared economy is developing for which the consumer may have to pay the bill, not only in taxes but in prices—unless there is some form of price preparedness. Products most likely to be affected by the defense program, says the Bureau of Labor Statistics, are metals, chemicals, textiles and shoes. The last two are now at record heights. Is the $40 shoe, the $200 suit in prospect? Will all products go up as they are in competition among buyers, including the Government, and an increasing number of well-paid war-plant workers? Will white-collar and other fixed income workers be caught even deeper in a new tide of inflation?

To permit more inflation to develop and weaken the economy would be an undoing of the billions spent in defense. Hence many consumers are asking what measures, if any, are being considered to protect their interest. They are wondering if they are going to have to pay still higher for the pretense of peace and of life as usual.

"Federal Pay Raise"

Your April 3 editorial "Federal Pay Raise" is utterly inexplicable. You admit that living costs have risen nearly 70 per cent since 1940. Yet you cavil at an average increase of $650 per year for Government workers. Simple arithmetic tells us that 1940, which is 26 per cent, leaves a gap of 44 per cent between what the Government worker is paid today and the increase in the cost of living.

Private industry has had to meet the increase in the cost of living and by and large has met it. The Government has not met it by 44 per cent which applied to the average annual salary of $3000 would mean a flat average increase at this time of $1320, instead of $650. The Government is now offering about 22 per cent more, leaving a gap of 22 per cent still between salary increases and the rise in the cost of living, and you have the temerity to proclaim that the $650, representing just half of what the increase should be to bring our salaries up to the 1940 standard, is "so large that it might be used as an argument for another round of wage increases in private industry."

If we have enough money to reduce taxes and pay for the Marshall Plan, then we should surely not cavil at meeting our obligations to Federal employes.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Wisconsin And The People

Lippmann

THE WISCONSIN primary has been an interesting experiment in how the American voters prefer to be dealt with this year. General MacArthur made no effort whatever to tell them anything, treating them as if they were primitive people who had not yet become self-governing and had to be ruled by mystery, magic, prestige, and awe. Governor Dewey talked at the people, using the nicely calculated points of an efficient public relations campaign. Mr. Stassen talked with the voters and argued with them.

His showing is pretty good evidence that a great many people are in a mood to be persuaded and led rather than to be cajoled and wheedled and pushed.

THIS HAS an important bearing on the question which perplexes the Administration: whether Congress and the country can be persuaded, or whether they have to be excited and frightened, to support the draft, the additional appropriations, and the military commitments which all the well-informed and responsible deem necessary at this time. There is no doubt that strong military measures taken promptly but without bluster and hysteria would give the maximum security at minimum cost and risk. But the Truman Administration is very bearish about the capacity of the people to follow rational leadership, perhaps because it does not know how to supply it. It is disposed, therefore, to resort to excitement, as it did over Greece and Turkey last year, as now over the Russian submarines off our coasts and other selected tidbits.

The trouble with using excitement as a device to pass necessary measures is that it aggravates the crisis which the measures are designed to deal with; and, then that it infects the Government itself—as for example in the curiously complicated mishap over Spain, and the vote in the House and the Myron Taylor mission to the Vatican and to Madrid; and then that it is self-defeating because the people, if they are excited too often, begin to realize that they are being excited, and to wonder whether the crisis is real.

GENERAL CLAY'S performance in Berlin is a striking example of how affairs can be well-conducted. Under great and deliberate provocation he has not lost face and he has not lost his temper. A lesser man could easily have been tempted, with the spotlight of the world upon him, to strike an heroic pose, to declaim, to utter memorable and resounding phrases, and to make himself the central figure in a grand opera. But that lesser man, though he too broke the Russian blockade of Berlin, would in fact have lost the game which the Russians chose to play. For he would have caused the Germans and the masses of the people of Europe to feel that American power does not promise security but a fearful explosion which would hurt our friends as much as our opponents.

The fact that General Clay has been as calm as he has been firm, that he has been as rational as he has been resolute, will enhance, not merely maintain, the prestige of the allies which the Russian maneuver was designed to test and to impair. No doubt there will be other maneuvers. It is comforting to know that a man of Clay's exceptional virtue, of his strength and moral refinement, is to remain where he is.

THERE IS considerable discussion in this country—the question was raised by Governor Dewey in his Wisconsin speeches—about the role which military men are playing in the Government. No generalization on the subject makes any sense. Nothing can be said about all the generals and admirals and their civilian chiefs which is remotely true of all of them. Nothing can be said about the "military mind" which is true of all the military minds. What can be said, I think, is that in the absence of coherent, considered leadership and the exercise of authority in the White House, authority is scattered among individuals and among bureaus. As a result there is among them in matters of high policy conflict and competition to make prevail what this individual or that happens to think is in the national interest.

It is this condition of affairs—which it is not easy to describe clearly—that is creating an impression of what is usually known as militarism. We are not now, I am satisfied, the victims of this dangerous disease. But our immunity to it is not what it should be. That is not because there is anything resembling a genuine militarist movement but because the world crisis is so great, the civilian power so weak, and the military establishment so imperfectly unified.

THERE IS nothing as yet that could not be cured by an efficient administration with a genuine mandate from the people.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Stassen's Wisconsin Revolution

THE SURPRISING outcome of the Wisconsin primary establishes at least two things beyond a reasonable doubt. First of all it eliminates Gen. Douglas MacArthur as a candidate for the Republican nomination.

Childs

He has failed to carry the State that he claimed as home. In spite of the sentimental appeal, which had a slightly phony sound, the voters of Wisconsin decided against the aging general who has been out of the United States for 12 years.

In view of this it is hard to see how he can survive even as a dark horse candidate to whom the delegates might turn in a deadlocked convention. The truth of the matter is that he was never a serious contender.

Beating the drum for the general was a curious hodgepodge of America Firsters and bitter-end reactionaries with a few ardent crusaders such as former Gov. Philip F. La Follette. Loudest drum beater was William Randolph Hearst, who certainly did not add to MacArthur's stature by trumpeting the enlistment under the MacArthur banner of such political giants as Shirley Temple.

On the positive side Harold Stassen becomes a formidable contender for the nomination. Up until now it has been the fashion among the professionals to dismiss him as a well-meaning fellow who liked campaigning for the Presidency. Regardless of what may happen in Nebraska's preferential primary next week, he can no longer be treated in this cavalier fashion.

THERE WILL, of course, be a dispute over why the outcome should have confounded all the experts who predicted a sweep for MacArthur. Those who wish to discount the Stassen victory will ascribe it to the power of the Republican organization in the State which backed him. Thomas E. Coleman, until recently chairman of the party in Wisconsin, threw his weight behind Stassen and Senator Joseph R. McCarthy campaigned actively for the former Minnesota Governor.

But observers in Wisconsin believe that Stassen himself did more than anyone else to bring about the victory. He carried the issues to the voters in a gruelling, intensive campaign.

His was not a campaign of fear. He offered a positive challenge, talking to thousands of men and women in towns throughout the State about a resolute America that could overcome communism in the world without resort to war. In my opinion this positive approach drew a response from voters who refused to be stampeded by the war scare that MacArthur's backers did their best to blow up.

Stassen's Wisconsin triumph is coupled with news from Maine and Iowa of his strength in the delegations from those States. The hard-working man from Minnesota will enter the Nebraska campaign with a new aura of victory. And while the outcome of the Nebraska primary is not binding on the delegates to the Republican convention, success there would give a further push to what has become a formidable candidacy.

IN NEBRASKA Stassen faces the opposition of a strong political machine. Senator Hugh Butler of that State has thrown the weight of his organization in the balance for his friend, Senator Robert A. Taft.

Opponents of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey are saying that his smashing defeat in Wisconsin eliminates him as a candidate. While it is a serious blow, this seems to me to go too far. The candidate who holds New York's 90 delegates will continue to be a contender.

Dewey's position is seriously weakened. Apparently confident of the outcome, he paid little heed to the Wisconsin test until the eleventh hour, when it was too late. He is now making a similar last-minute appeal in Nebraska.

In Missouri, State Republican Chairman Barrak T. Mattingly has worked in season and out to hold that State's delegates for Dewey. But he conceded before the Wisconsin primary that defeat there would greatly weaken Dewey's strength in Missouri.

There is one incidental effect in Wisconsin and that is to put another nail in the coffin of La Follette progressivism. Old-time Progressives were saddened at the spectacle of Phil La Follette stumping the State for MacArthur and hailing him as a great liberal. In his own home county La Follette, a MacArthur delegate, ran three to one behind the stalwart Republican, Senator McCarthy, a Stassen delegate.

Stassen's victory is a minor revolution. It will be felt throughout the party right down to that day in June when the fateful convention assembles to choose a standard bearer.

Restraining Speech Perilous, Says Durr

Time Limit Waived

Jailed Man's Letter Plea Wins Appeal

A prisoner's plea that his jailers prevented his filing of appeal beyond time limit for such action was honored yesterday by the Municipal Court of Appeals.

The court waived time limitation in the case and granted appeal to John St. Francis Slaughter, 39 one-armed alleged sex offender, 1002 21st st. nw. It also appointed Dennis Collins, attorney, to conduct Slaughter's appeal.

Slaughter complained to the Appellate Court by letter from the District Workhouse at Occoquan, Va., that his jailers at both Municipal Court and District Jail would not let him contact his attorney. Because of that delay, he said in affidavits, he could not meet the five-day limit for filing such appeals.

He was sentenced on January 23 to 30 months' imprisonment on multiple charges involving alleged molestation of a 2-year-old girl. The child's father testified he caught Slaughter, a stranger to the family, in the girl's bedroom.

Slaughter's charges that his jailers at the lock-up in Municipal Court and at District Jail would not let him either telephone or write a letter to his attorney, Louis Jongbloet, were disputed by the United States attorney's office which investigated.

FCC Commissioner Sees Danger Great As Ballot Fraud

Restraining freedo mof speech is just as dangerous to democracy as fraud at the ballot box, Federal Commissioner Clifford J. Durr said yesterday.

Durr, outspoken stormy petrel of the FCC, addressed a luncheon meeting of the Washington Chapter, Southern Conference for Human Welfare, at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

Declaring that crises such as the present world situation always threaten freedom of speech, he said:

"Freedom of speech is a pretty dangerous thing in time of crisis, but it seems to me that democratic government must take certain calculated risks in times of crisis, or it ceases to be democratic."

Speaking extemporaneously, Durr said a newspaperman called him before the meeting and asked him if he was aware that the Southern Conference has been termed a "subversive group." Durr said he told the caller he certainly would not address a subversive group, then told the luncheon audience with a smile:

"I understand you are not subversive enough to make the Attorney General's list (of subversive organizations), and too subversive to be ignored by the Committee on Un-American Activities—I guess that makes you a good middle-of-the-road organization."

Durr's wife, Mrs. Virginia Durr, is chairman of the Southern Conference's Committee for Virginia.

Babies Born Now . Can Expect Much Longer Lives

There's a heap of extra living credited to medical advances since the turn of the century.

Last year's baby harvest will live a total of 67 million more years than if the same number of babies had been born in 1900, according to statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Looking at it other ways, they say, 570,000 more children will survive to school age; 700,000 more to voting age, and one million more to the comparatively ripe age of 65. The figures are for United States.

All add up to the statistical fact that the number of persons born last year who can expect to reach 40 is larger than the total number of children born in any previous year in the history of United States.

Hearing on Bus Extension Plea Set for Tuesday

Flanagan

Capital Transit Co. opposition to a proposed extension and improvement of service on its S-6 16th st. and Eastern ave. nw. bus line will be heard at 10 a. m. Tuesday, the Public Utilities Commission announced last night.

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan made the announcement following a four-hour hearing at which representatives of Shepherd Park Citizens Association argued for better service.

Vernon V. Baker, representing the association, sought through service at 15-minute intervals during nonrush hours from Georgia and Alaska aves. nw., via Eastern ave. and 16th st. to the Federal Triangle downtown.

The plan would eliminate shuttle service now provided every 30 minutes in nonrush hours between 16th and Eastern and 14th and Colorado ave. nw.

Canada Town Becomes New 'Yukon' in Uranium Rush

Flin Flon, Manitoba, April 7 (AP). Prospectors, armed with Geiger counters instead of washing pans, descended on this little town today in search of a metal even more valuable than the yellow ore that touched off the famous Klondike gold rush just 50 years ago.

They hope to find uranium, prime raw material for the atomic fission.

They have been hurrying into Flin Flon by plane and the one rail line since announcement March 31 that George Branscombe and John McLelland had discoverad uranium deposits. More than 80 claims have been staked.

The influx of uranium prospectors already is beginning to resemble the famed Yukon rush of 1898. Saloons buzz with the latest rumors of uranium discoveries.

Flin Flon, 17 years old, is 800 miles northwest of Winnipeg. There are no roads leading into it, only the one rail line. The copper and gold miners here are the highest paid in all Canada. The streets were built on top of the sewers, which was easier than cutting into the almost solid rock surface.

It gets so cold here in winter that electric lights burn constantly because the filaments freeze and crack if they are turned off.

UMT Appears Losing on Hill To Air Force With 70 Groups group, Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) told reporters.

Another member of the group quoted Symington as saying that as between UMT and a 70-group air program, he recommended the latter. He said the Air Force chief declared that when he agreed to back UMT he had believed the Administration program would include the 70 groups.

As submitted by President Truman and Defense Secretary James Forrestal, the preparedness plan calls for merely bolstering the present 55 USAF groups with additional planes and men. It also provides for UMT, a stopgap draft to boost Army and Navy strength and additional equipment for all services.

According to Gurney, Symington told the committee the Administration's 1949 budget provides $3,641,000,000 for the Air Force. With an additional 1.8 billions, a start could be made on the 70-group program, it was said.

This would provide for plane procurement only. Gurney said Symington told the committee the 70-group program would require boosting USAF manpower to an average of 420,000 officers and men next year. The total would rise to 453,000 by July 1, 1949, and 502,000 a year later.

During the afternoon session, the committee heard Army Secretary Kenneth Royall and Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff. They testified, it was said, that if the Air Force is increased to 70 groups, the Army must provide an additional 15,000 service troops for the USAF.

Such an increase beyond the 782,000 Army strength provided in the supplemental budget would cost another 230 millions. It was made plain, however, that this Army boost would not provide the additional combat and supply troops deemed necessary to support such an expanded air arm.

Tentative estimates of a "balanced" military machine, with the Army and Navy enlarged to the size required to support a 70-group air program, are: Army, 920,000 officers and men; Navy and Marine Corps, 660,000; Air Force 502,000; total, 2,082,000.

Members of the Senate and House Armed Services Committee are by no means sold on the need for such balanced strength. Several say that such a program—which Forrestal estimates would cost twice as much as his present 14-billion-dollar-a-year plan—would put the services on a near-war footing.

The Defense Secretary sat through yesterday's Senate committee sessions. Senators said Forrestal did not make any direct comment on Symington's proposal to go beyond the Administration program. Chairman Gurney declared the meeting was "harmonious."

Fate of the 70-group program apparently depends upon whether the cost estimates submitted yesterday are borne out.

"If you can get a 70-group Air Force for 1.8 billions, I'm in favor of it," said Senator Harry Byrd (D., Va.).

Russia, he added, "will understand that better than anything else."

The committee had planned to hear Navy officials today, but they will be testifying in the House. It is expected Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan will be called Friday, with Army and Air Force chiefs probably coming back next week.

Asked if this will further delay action on the preparedness bill, Senator Gurney said:

"I wouldn't even guess we would be through next week."

Should the Senate Committee approve a much larger air force and drop UMT, as appeared likely last night, it would mean the end of the training plan this year. House leaders favor the air power program and probably will back the draft, but have been unwilling to support UMT.

Unless voted by the Senate committee—which earlier favored the program—and the upper chamber itself, the training bill is doomed.

Higher Police Budget Is Asked for Montgomery County

A $225,539 Police Department budget increase was asked yesterday by Montgomery County Police Chief Charles M. Orme in recommendations prepared for the county's board of commissioners.

The police chief called for increased pay for policemen and for creation of three new police bureaus, including a traffic bureau.

His requested $677,882 budget compares with the current $452,343 outlay. The current figure, however, was augmented by a $40,000 interim wage increase granted police last September.

Besides a traffic bureau, Orme proposed creation of a personnel and training bureau and a communications and equipment bureau. The three new bureaus would be placed under direction of a captain, with a sergeant in direct charge of the traffic bureau and two civilian clerks assigned to the other two.

Orme also asked assignment of a corporal in the Silver Spring and Bethesda districts as a special accident investigator and two-man squads on every shift in each of the three districts, Bethesda, Silver Spring and Rockville. The latter proposal would require addition of 24 patrolmen, Orme said.

Other requests included a reduction of the maximum age limit for new appointees from 35 to 30, extension of the probationary period from six months to a year and blanketing officer promotions in the county merit system.

Hiring of a full-time traffic engineer was also asked or, in lieu of that, delegation of such duties to the county engineer or county road supervisor.

The following pay scale was recommended: desk clerks, now earning $2400 to $2700, would earn $2500 to $2900 with annual increments of $100; privates would be upped from starting pay of $2600 and a maximum of $3000 to $2800 starting pay and $100 annual increases to a top of $3200.

Other requested increases: Corporals, from $3150 to $3500; sergeants, $3400 to $3850 lieutenants, $3700 to; $4200 captains, $4000 to $4600; inspector, $4300 to $5000; chief, $5000 to $5500, and administrative assistant, $3000 to $3500.

Fairfax Board Plans to Zone For Highway

Fairfax County Board of Supervisors at its biweekly meeting yesterday:

1. Agreed, at the request of Monticello Highway Commission Member Rufus J. Coldwell, to obtain from the State Department of Highways the exact route the proposed highway will take through the county, so it can be guided in future zoning requests. Plans call for the memorial highway to run 14 miles across the county on its route from Washington to Jefferson's home in Charlottesville.

2. Voted to ask State aid in spraying highways in the campaign against Japanese beetles.

3. Appointed four road viewers to view roads the first week in May for inclusion in the State secondary road system. Selected were Frank Malice, J. B. Armfield, Hugo Maters and Elmer Davis. One other will be named.

Peoples Drug Sales Dip for First Quarter

By S. Oliver Goodman

Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., reported yesterday that sales in the first three months this year totaled $10,861,639, a dip of 0.6 per cent as compared with the like 1947 period.

The chain's sales for March amounted to $3,810,081, a drop of $40,351 or 1 per cent compared with the same 1947 month. Treasurer W. H. Churchill said the company operated 136 stores in March, against 133 in the same month last year.

Meanwhile, Sears, Roebuck & Co. reported that gross sales last month were $194,524,475, an increase of 28.2 per cent over the $151,710,686 for March, 1947. For February and March, the first two months of the company's fiscal year, sales aggregated $334,468,571 this year, a gain of 25.6 per cent. Both 1948 figures were record highs for the respective periods, the company said.

Montgomery Ward & Co. reported March sales were $107,102,599, an increase of 9.8 per cent over the $97,551,906 of March, 1947. For the first two months of the firm's fiscal year, the total this year was $182,733,936, or 8.3 per cent more than in the same 1947 period.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: It's not news when Thomas J. Shryock, jr., Washington branch manager of Remington Rand Typewriter Division, receives a decoration. But for the record, the French government has just awarded him the Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre with Palm for his services in the liberation of France. Previously, he had been honored with nine decorations, six of which were American, two Italian and one French. As a colonel he was placed in command of the 421st Field Artillery Group which served throughout the campaign in France and Germany and afterward in the Army of Occupation in Bavaria. Colonel Shryock returned to Remington Rand, with whom he had been associated since 1925, after his retirement from the Army in June, 1946.

Col. Shryock

SALES STUNTS: Return of a buyer's market has resulted in some unusual ideas here. Loew's Palace offers free coffee with your movies plus a record player in the lounge with latest discs . . . Carbert's jewelry store in Bethesda spots parking meters about to run out of paid time, inserts a nickel and puts a small card under windshield wiper stating "It was our privilege to save you a parking fine by putting a nickel in the meter" . . . Capital Airlines gives infants "short snorter" certificates signed by plane's pilot and hostess . . . Then there was the local auto dealer who advertised "special sale of slightly used dollar bills, three for $2.69; as big a bargain as our slightly used autos."

ODD LOTS: A steady stream of visitors and new customers marked opening yesterday of the Congress Heights Branch of Anacostia National Bank. The new office at 4019 South Capitol st. is managed by John M. Harris . . . J. O. Brott, assistant general counsel of American Bankers Association, will address local bank auditors at a meeting tonight in Burlington Hotel . . . Have you noticed: The dollar isn't going so far but it's going a lot faster . . . Synthetic gasoline from natural gas can be made available at only 3 cents a gallon more than cost of petroleum gasoline, Western Petroleum Refiners Association was told STRATEGIC: The drive for Government stockpiling of "strategic materials for national defense" has brought up a new one, reports the Associated Press. Some persons in the coffee trade are suggesting that the Army should start building a stockpile of green coffee. This would take care of the Army's needs if trade routes to coffee countries were disrupted. The coffee trade feels that in war, coffee takes its place along with copper, oil and steel as strategic (psychologically anyway).

EQUIPMENT: The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. told the Interstate Commerce Commission the road is in the market for $49,050,000 of new equipment. As a starter on these purchases Pennsylvania asked authority to issue $9,600,000 of equipment trust certificates in connection with a purchase of 79 Diesel electric locomotives and 217 new passenger cars. The company said it plans a total equipment trust issue of $39,240,000 in connection with all the purchases.

LOANS MOUNT: Second National Bank of Washington reported loans and discounts of $12,833,188, as of March 31, an increase of $499,008 for the first three months this year. Undivided profits rose to $287,265 from $263,633 on December 31, 1947. Government securities investment dropped to $10,188,625 from $10,735,822. Total deposits on March 31 stood at $28,897,770.

NEW PUBLICATIONS: The Ronald Press Co. of New York has published two new books on finance. "Money Market Primer" is a study of the institutions and operations of the New York money market, written by three New York University professors of economics. "Bank Credits and Acceptances" is the third revised edition of the manual by Wilbert Ward, vice president of the National City Bank, and Henry Harfield, New York attorney.

U. S. Chamber Won't Back Own Experts on Statistics

By J. A. Livingston

BUSINESSMEN these days are "wee, tim'rous beasties." They're not the buccaneers of old—the men Matthew Josephson described as robber barons; they're not devil-may-care swashbucklers like John L. Lewis. They won't even fight for their own good.

A recent sequence of events at the United States Chamber of Commerce makes this clear. About two weeks ago, the Chamber's 23-man Business Statistics Committee unanimously approved a resolution declaring that the House of Representatives had cut the appropriations of the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the Bureau of the Census too drastically and urged the Senate Appropriations Committee to make a careful restudy with a view toward restoration of part if not all of the cut.

Livingston

The committee consisted of outstanding United States economists, statisticians and businessmen, including Russell C. Harrington, partner in Ernst & Ernst, certified public accountants; Rufus S. Tucker, economist of General Motors; C. A. Sinekiewicz, president of the Central-Penn National Bank, Philadelphia; Thomas S. Holden, president F. W. Dodge Corp.; Frank M. Surface, assistant to the president of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, and Lyman Hill of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

THE COMMITTEE wanted Harrington, as its chairman, to testify before the Senate Appropriations Committee—with the full weight and influence of the U. S. Chamber behind him.

The Chamber's board of directors said no. The board felt that the suggestion had merit. But the Chamber had gone on record as favoring a general reduction in Federal expenditures. Therefore the board concluded that it could not single out a specific segment of Government for special treatment. Result: The BLS and the Bureau of Census did not get the support of the very group that ought to be supporting them.

The dilemma of the Chamber's board of directors is understandable. When the Chamber recommended the appropriation for the census of manufactures last year, some Congressmen said in effect: "You want us to cut appropriations for everything else, but you want this!" So this year the board chose to keep hands off.

In choosing to be modest and unself-seeking, the Chamber deprived the country of expert advice and advocacy. Business men ought to feel duty-bound to safeguard statistics. Not only are economic data important to them in their own operations, but they necessary if we are to prevent booms and busts which hurt businessmen, workers and consumers alike.

CONSIDER a single instance: the Census Bureau now collects statistics on wholesale and retail trade. This information enables manufacturers, wholesalers and merchants, both large and small, and covering such diverse lines of trade as drugs, electric appliances, groceries, hardware, apparel, etc., to see whether they're keeping up or lagging behind in sales; also to measure whether they're under- or over-inventoried.

The very existence of the statistics provides a benchmark—a yardstick for critical evaluation of operations. And insofar as the statistics contribute to more efficient business planning, they contribute toward economic stability.

To be sure, members of the Chamber's board of directors have heard Government statistics criticized. And they were properly wary. They didn't want to go on record as saying that all data provided by the BLS or the Census are accurate or useful.

Nevertheless, it's no solution to sit idly by while the House cuts the Census appropriation in two years from $9,210,000 in fiscal '47 to $3,900,000 in fiscal '48 and the BLS from $6,400,000 to $2,500,000. Such meat-ax cuts make the data scantier and less reliable. Constant study, work and appropriations are necessary to improve, enlarge and make statistics more useful.

The Chamber's board of directors got so lost in the forest of its own policy on Government expenditures that it failed to see a tree it ought to save and nurture—in its own as well as the national interest. Unfortunately, now members of the Senate Appropriations Committee may erroneously regard th Chamber's formal silence as consent.

New York Cotton

New York, April 7 (AP).—Cotton futures closed strong today at gains of $1.85 to $2.50 a bale.

The market started off slightly lower on hedging and profittaking, but thereafter moved higher as trade buying for mill and export account found only limited offerings. Short covering aided a closing rally which carried the December and March deliveries into new seasonal high ground.

Expectation of a large export business under the foreign aid program was again the dominant influence in the market. Spot houses sold nearby contracts freely on the upturn which was credited partly to hedging and also to liquidation of futures against purchases of raw cotton. The latter was reflected in Tuesday's spot sales at the 10 primary markets which reached their highest level since early January.

Capra Could Use 14-Carat Villain

By Richard L. Coe

"JUST TAKE VILLAINS," says Frank Capra. "The ideal villain for us in Hollywood is an unemployed atheist without any nationality, professional or labor affiliations.

"That's an old chestnut, I grant you," continues the Producer-Director of 'State of the Union,' "but it does suggest some of the difficulty of making a movie. Censorship, as such, isn't so much the trouble as is the economic sanctions pressure groups can—and do—level against the movies.

"Every story must have a villain, but you can't make him a foreigner because then some nation will not permit that picture, or any other picture made by the studio, to be shown within its borders. Bankers don't like their business to be tarred, and the same thing goes for all others. Even glassblowers have objected to the showing of canned beer.

"That's why 'Treasure of Sierra Madre' was such an admirable picture. The villain in that one was gold.

"Don't think you people," Capra told the town's critics, "are the only ones worried about Hollywood's output. Out there we're all more than uneasy. The answer to the slipping box office is better pictures, yes, but you never know whether you've made a better picture until you've got it in front of an audience.

"I remember the first time we showed 'Lost Horizon' to a preview audience. People laughed throughout the picture, and when it was over they came out muttering: 'Gosh, what a crazy, stupid movie.' I took a couple of days off in a mountain cabin and when I came back I thought I had the answer. We just dropped the first three reels, beginning the story with the plane landing in Tibet, leaving out the retrospective aspect of the book. That turned the trick. No, you never do know exactly what makes a good movie until it's all done.

Best Directors Are Back

"Yes, the wartime boom is over, and don't forget that during that time some of the best directors and producers were in uniform. They're just getting their first pictures out. John Huston has done 'Sierra Madre.' George Stevens has made 'I Remember Mama.' John Ford has 'The Fugitive.' Not long ago I tallied up 10 top men who have just got back to picture making.

"I don't dispute the claim that better pictures should have been made when war money was free. And there, I think, is the frequent fault. The big studios refuse to look ahead.

"What I've always wanted is for the big studios to set up research departments, employing young writers, directors and actors. With the enormous profits made on some pictures, a fraction could be allotted to such a scheme that would result in all sorts of interesting ideas from minds which haven't got a place in the present setup. If out of such an investment only one new talent were discovered, the whole thing would have been worth the expense.

Americanizing the World

"But that's something I find the big studios always refusing to do. I don't think it's good business at all. And I've certainly tried to get the studios to see it my way.

"At bottom, movie-making is a money-making business. Those pressure groups are a constant economic threat and the studios have to control their stories as business properties.

"And don't forget, too, that other nations have discovered that American movies are Americanizing the world. When foreigners see American cars and ice boxes in our movies, that's the sort of cars and ice boxes they want. Movies affect trade, and that's why you're finding nations setting up quotas and trade barriers against our movies."

"Mr. Smith" and the Reporters

Capra, whose movie experience dates back to his days as a gagman for Hal Roach, has the swarthy good looks of a native Sicilian. He's a quick, shrewd talker and has a phenomenal memory.

We recalled a previous visit of his to Washington. That was for the opening of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." A newspaper friend of ours always has looked back on that picture with contempt. "The thing," our pal will tell you, "showed every newspaperman drunk and disorderly." He'd told that to Capra, too, a meeting which the director recalled before the preview showing of last night's "State of the Union."

"I remember him well," laughed Capra. "And what I remember most about him was that when he made that remark to me, he was drunk himself."

This department suspects it's a canard, but that's the way Capra remembers our friend.

PEOPLE ON PARADE: Yes, that was the First Family at the Capitol last night for "State of the Union" . . . Practically the whole cast of "An Inspector Calls" munching at Olmsted's, which Turned Melville Cooper into a poet. Wrote he: "Your supper was super, your friend, Melville Cooper." . . . The cast of the Priestley play, by the way, includes a noted theater name though you never see her, Doris Lloyd's understudy, Olive Reeves-Smith . . . Patsy O'Dea writes: "Imagine Miss Bergman taking her daughter to see 'Going My Way' and convincing her that she was in it." . . . You're so right, Patsy, mea culpa . . . The Junior Leaguers being feted before and after their "Follies of '48," which opens a three-night run tonight at Lisner Auditorium . . . Gilbert Miller, one of the most soigne of first nighters, expected back in the town that once was almost his habitat for Monday's opening of "The Play's the Thing" at the National . . . Seats go on sale for that one today . . . This is the morning Lynn Allison sings again at the Capitol, where, before becoming a mother, she chirped for a record-breaking run of seven years . . . Helen Martin rehearsing with Paul Kain's orchestra for the opening of Glen Echo's ballroom Saturday night.

CALL HER VIV-EKAH: Here is Viveca Lindfors with Dennis Morgan in "To the Victor," opening this morning at the Warner. The Swedish star's name thus adds one more to the trick list. You say it VIV-ekah, not Viv-EE-Kah. Just as it's Claudette Colbear, not bert; Laurence Oliv-ee-ay, not Olivier, and Bette, not Bet, Davis. Got it? VIV-ekah. Lindfors as in Lindfors

Designated alternates to Cunningham were Capts. Clarence H. Lutz, Archie M. Winfree, John E. Fondahl, Albert I. Bullock, George R. Wallrodt, Beverly C. Beach, Clyde N. Strange, Loraine T. Bulgaria and Turkey At Odds Over Attaches

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 6 (Delayed) (U.P.)—Bulgaria has demanded the recall of two Turkish military attaches here and in reply Turkey has asked the Bulgarian military attache to leave Ankara, it was made known today.

Bulgaria said the two Turk attaches "engaged in activities infringing Bulgaria's state security." The note asked that Turkey send substitutes.

Turkey replied that she considered the jobs of the attaches of both countries superfluous because of "difficulties in performing their functions," the foreign office said.

Boys' Club Holds Derby, Gets $2850

The Boys' Club of Washington held its "1948 Match-Box Derby" last night, with 82 whooping contestants vying for prizes. The derby was held as Boys' Week here got in full swing.

In the next room at the club, the National Capital Optimists Club presented club officials with a check for $2850 and quietly ran off its annual elections. New president of the Optimists is Dr. Clayton Hixson of 2749 Woodley pl. nw. He succeeds Dr. Edward A. Krause.

Other officers chosen last night were: Dr. Walter Neil, first vice president; Joseph R. Morris, second vice president; Dr. Al McDonald, treasurer, and Frank Steinko, secretary.

The match box derby, part of the club's activities during the eighth annual National Boys' Club Week, which ends Sunday night, featured finalists in a month of miniature, home-made auto competition.

Winner of Class A was 8-year-old Billy Bragunier, 262 16th st. ne, Billy's wooden car, which, after a slight push down an incline, raced along for 86 feet 2 inches—a new record. Class A entrants were between 6 and 13 years old.

Class B—13 through 17—was won by Charles B. Dobson, 13, of 543 11th st. se. His tiny vehicle, weighted with lead, traveled 85 feet 6 inches.

Both first-place winners were awarded a 21-piece model-making set.

Following the Optimist Club banquet, the check for $2850 was handed Boys' Club President George Muth by Al McDonald, Optimists' treasurer.

'Story's' Truth Unchallenged, Farley Tells Book Luncheon

James A. Farley, speaking of his book limning the Roosevelt Administration, "Jim Farley's Story," declared he had determined to "tell the truth and let the chips fall."

The former Postmaster General's remarks were directed to about 650 persons who crowded the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel at The Washington Post's Book and Author luncheon.

After depicting Roosevelt as "giving courage and confidence to millions of Americans during the most crucial period in the Nation's history," Farley said he had no quarrel "with anyone who objects to the book."

The speaker declared "all sides of the question should be told. The story was written from accurate memorandums dictated day by day. No one has questioned the accuracy of any of the statements in it."

Farley was introduced as "the most able politician in the United States," by Toastmaster Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post.

A call for a more widespread knowledge of the United States form of government as an antidote for totalitarianism, was sounded by Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.), author of "Our American Government."

"In our opposition to communism let us not fall into the trap of fascism," Patman pleaded, remarking on his surprise at House sentiment for including Spain in the aid program.

Other speakers included Margaret Widdemer, author of "Lani" and Willie Snow Ethridge, who wrote "It's Greek to Me."

Both brief talks were in humorous vein stressing problems of a writer.

Four women won books in a drawing held at the luncheon. They were Mrs. A. G. Peoples, 1332 Massachusetts ave. nw.; Mrs. Helen F. Blandford, National Press Building; Florence M. Stein, Arlington, Va., and Edith Macauley, 7775 17th st. nw.

Besides the speakers, writers introduced were: V. C. Jones, author of "Ranger Mosby" and Burke Wilkinson, author of "Proceed at Will."

Empire State Building Has Fire on 57th Floor

New York, April 7 (U.P.)—A fire broke out tonight on the fifty-seventh floor of the Empire State Building, the world's tallest building. It was extinguished by firemen after half and hour.

The fire in the offices of Ciba States, Ltd., a chemical firm, blossomed spectacularly, crawling up the side of the 102-story building. Windows blew out, showering broken glass on the streets below.

Fair-Hearing Rules Framed By Bender

Chairman George H. Bender (R., Ohio) of a House Executive Expenditures Subcommittee yesterday laid down a new set of rules for his group aimed at assuring all witnesses a fair hearing.

He said they were adopted to offset what he termed "valid" criticisms leveled at congressional committees on the House floor and in the press.

Bender said anyone who believes he has been injured as a result of testimony before his subcommittee will be permitted to file an answer within 10 days regardless whether he was present at the hearing.

The new rules also provide that witnesses may bring along lawyers to advise them. But the attorneys will not be permitted to cross-examine other witnesses without specific permission from the subcommittee.

Bender said he hoped that the rules would keep the subcommittee record from being cluttered up with "irrelevancies, or with baseless character defamations which reflect unfavorably on the committees which publicize them as well as on the witnesses."

Bender's group recommends legislation calling for changes among executive departments and also proposes judicial proceedings if it finds them warranted.

Father Accused Of Cruelty to Son And Daughter

Clifton L. Peoples, 33, of 501 L st. se., was yesterday held under $500 bond for further hearing April 14 in Municipal Court on charges of cruelty to his two children.

Arrested on complaint of his wife, Peoples allegedly stood his 5-year-old son in a corner last Tuesday night until the lad dropped from exhaustion. The defendant's wife also charged she found him abusing their 4-year-old daughter when the wife returned home earlier that day.

Assistant United States Attorney Stafford Grady asked Municipal Court Judge Walter J. Casey for more time to investigate the case. He said he was awaiting hospital report on examination of the girl to determine whether an additional charge will be placed.

put me on a bus for Baltimore that night. My father lived there."

Several years of work in Baltimore . . . then a move to New York City . . . the draft.

Peterkin said he entered the Army in March, 1941, and eventually found himself stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., as a military policeman.

In 1942 a Negro soldier went on a shooting rampage in a USO Club in Alexandria. Peterkin entered the club and shot and killed the crazed soldier.

"After that I served 11 months in Italy with a field artillery unit; I saw combat," said Peterkin.

In Alexandria, Peterkin had married. When the Army discharged him in August, 1945, he returned there to his wife. Two months later he applied for a job with VA. He got it.

Threw Brick in "Self-Defense"

Detective Jones said Peterkin readily admitted throwing the brick which killed Davis. "But it was self-defense," said Peterkin.

The FBI last night could not explain how Peterkin's checks, put out by Winston-Salem police in 1935, could have gone undetected when he entered and left the Army and when he applied for his Government job. The FBI files were being checked.

Winston-Salem police had a record of Peterkin's prints because of a previous arrest for craps shooting.

Like the confusion of the fingerprints, there was no agreement on the fugitive's correct name. He insisted it is Peterkin. Winston-Salem police said his real name is Joe Pickett. In FBI records he is Joe Petkin.

VA said after Peterkin's arrest his efficiency rating had been excellent. He has no police record in Alexandria. Police said he has waived extradition to North Carolina and will be returned there today.

Beall Wants PUC To Suggest How To Aid Bus Service

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) has proposed that the District Public Utilities Commission tell Congress how Washington bus service can be improved.

Beall, chairman of the House District Subcommittee in charge of streets and traffic, introduced a House bill calling for the PUC to study the present public bus service in the city, and report recommendations for improvements to Congress by next January 15.

The report would cover these questions: What changes in existing bus routes should be made, how time schedules should be changed and what additional bus routes, including express ones, should be established.

The bill went to the House District Committee.

Competition Date Set

The annual battalion competition and Part I of the annual band competition of local high schools will be held beginning at 2 p. m. today in Central High School Stadium.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., April 7.—All of a sudden a little fellow by the unromantic name of Sam Meeks is bulking big in the infield plans of the Washington ball club. He's a shortstop who hasn't done anything wrong yet and he's been doing a heap of things on the sensational side, and the Nats are wondering what they have come up with.

POVICH

Manager Joe Kuhel is hoping it's no mirage. There isn't much of Meeks to look at—he's only 5 feet 7 inches, a small cut above little Phil Rizutto of the Yankees, and he weighs only 156 after a thorough dunking, uniform and all, but he has been making all the plays and swinging a potent bat, too.

The most incredible performance was Meeks' home run swat the other day against the Newark club, when he swung on the first pitch he saw in his first time at bat and walloped it over the center-fielder's head. Where he generates that kind of power is slightly baffling, but the kid's whole performance since joining the Nats has been a series of sensations. He wasn't supposed to be with the Washington club in the first place.

MEEKS WASN'T INVITED to the Washington camp at the outset of training because he was just a Class B league shortstop with Charlotte last year, and they were moving him up to Chattanooga for more seasoning, but the tales of his feats from Chattanooga drifted over to Orlando from nearby Winter Garden so consistently that Kuhel, with a shortstop problem of his own, was intrigued.

So the Nats sent for Meeks and said they would give him a "look." What they got was an eyeful. The kid roamed the shortstop territory and revelled in making the hard chances look routine. But after a week, he was returned to Chattanooga for reasons that at the time were vague.

The other day they brought him over from Winter Garden on the shuttle bus for another look, and this time they were actually smitten with the kid. Kuhel had his contract transferred to the Nats. They're going to keep him. They don't know as yet how much he will hit, but they know he can play shortstop, and they suspect that he'll hit big league pitching, too.

IF MEEKS DOES make it, Joe Cronin can be credited with an assist. Cronin saw the lad play against his Red Sox in Sarasota 10 days ago. When the Boston general manager was in Orlando for a few days' visit with Uncle Clark Griffith, he expressed amazement that Meeks was not with the club. "Where's that kid shortstop who came up with all those fancy plays against us in Sarasota?" he inquired.

Cronin convinced Griffith and Kuhel that Meeks was a hot article. The next day they ordered him back to the Washington club. Cronin used to play a lot of shortstop himself. He went down the line for Meeks. "If you have a shortstop problem it's your own fault," he told Griffith. "This Meeks is the best-looking young shortstop since we came up with Johnny Pesky."

They're giving Johnny Sullivan first shot at the regular shortstop job, but Meeks is crowding him right now. Griffith is so fascinated by the rookie that he declared. "We'll carry him as a pinch hitter if nothing else. He looks as if he can rock that ball and that's what they tell us he did for Charlotte all last season."

SOME of the figures on young Meeks are beginning to come to light now. He was a potent socker with Charlotte, batting .335, and driving in 104 runs, only three fewer than the RBI champion of the league. A right-handed hitter with some kind of hidden power, apparently, he doesn't look big enough to ride that ball for extra bases, but that was his specialty in the minors.

The Washington organization bought him a couple of years ago, on the recommendation of Spencer Abbott, their manager at Charlotte. Abbott saw Meeks playing for Anderson, S. C., in the same league and okayed the $5000 purchase price that fetched him, a big sum for players out of that circuit.

He's 24 years old and lost a couple of years in baseball while in the service. He isn't exactly cocky, but he has plenty of poise. One of the Red Sox tried to knock him down on a play at second base at Sarasota and wound up getting the hip, a mouthful of sod and a very superior frown from little Meeksy, who ain't meek at all.

If He Flunks This Course He Deserves to Be Barred

Berkeley, Calif., April 7 (AP).—Memo to a football coach with that old headache—how to get the star player on the field when his grades are low and the teachers say "no.":

Jack Jensen, star fullback of the University of California Bears, appeared at spring practice yesterday. He was in full uniform, despite a ruling barring him from all university activity except the books for spring term.

But Jensen enrolled in a one-unit course, "the theory of coaching," taught by Lynn "Pappy" Waldorf, head football coach.

The course requires "field laboratory experience" which means Jensen must attend all spring practice sessions, "Pappy" explained. He won't participate in the scrimmages, but the course requires "similar maneuvers."

Eagles Elevate Coach

Philadelphia, April 7 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles today elevated backfield Coach Charley Ewart to the general managership.

Ewart succeeds Al Ennis who leaves to assist Owner Alexis Thompson in midget auto racing enterprises at Paterson, N. J., and New York.

Title Bout Set

Los Angeles, April 7 (AP).—World Lightweight Champion Ike Williams demanded a stiff price to defend his title, and got it.

Williams was given a guarantee of $40,000, or 40 per cent of the net gate receipts, to put his crown on the block against Enrique Bolanos, the No. 1 challenger, in their 15-round battle here May 25. Bolanos agreed to a straight 15 per cent of the gate.

Bullets Beat Stags, 73-67

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—The Baltimore Bullets staved off a second-half rally by the Chicago Stags tonight to win the opening game of the semifinal playoffs of the Basketball Association of America, 73 to 67, before 2822 fans in Chicago Stadium.

Although outscored from the field, 25 baskets to 19, Baltimore's accuracy from the free throw line kept the Easterners' in front throughout the game. The Bullets tallied on 35 of 42 chances while the best the Stags could do was to convert only 17 of 31 free throws.

Going into the second half with a 14-point deficit, Chicago rallied in the first five minutes of the final period to come within a point, 42-41, of the Bullets. Baltimore, however, played defensive basketball and continued to score on Stag fouls.

Handball Star Is Eliminated

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Alex Trompas of San Diego, Calif., scored the first major upset of the National A.A.U. singles handball tournament today when he defeated fourth seeded Paul Merlo of Detroit, 21-9 and 21-14.

Trompas, representing the San Diego Rowing Club, faces tough competition, however, since he is now in the upper half of the bracket which contains the defending champion, Gus Lewis of the Hollywood A.C. Lewis faces Victor Hershkowitz of New York tonight and the winner will meet Trompas tomorrow in the quarter-final round.

Cincinnati Gives Rocky 'Approval'

Cincinnati, April 7 (AP).—The Cincinnati Boxing Commission has given "informal approval" for a 10-round, nontitle bout here late this month, featuring Middleweight Champ Rocky Graziano, George Murphy, commission secretary, reported tonight.

Murphy said he had polled commission members by telephone after Harry Hartman, matchmaker for the Jack E. Molloy American Legion Post here, inquired what the commission's position might be on a Graziano bout.

Man Identified as Sutherland Found Wandering in Muddy Field

Steelers Grid Coach Believed Victim of Amnesia in Kentucky

WICKLIFFE, KY., April 7 (AP).—Ballard County Jailer R. F. Crice said a man identified as Dr. John (Jock) Sutherland, head coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers professional football team, was found today in a muddy field at Bandana, Ky.

Crice said Sutherland apparently was a victim of amnesia.

St. Mary's Hospital officials at Cairo, Ill., where the man was taken, confirmed the identification.

(At the hospital, officials said the diagnosis had not been made, but that he had been definitely identified as the famous Pittsburgh coach. The hospital said he appeared to be in a dazed condition, but that he was able to take dinner.)

Dr. H. F. Russell of Wickliffe, who took Sutherland to the Cairo hospital, said he did not know for certain who the man was but that he was notified that a nephew of Sutherland was en route to Cairo by plane.

"I have not yet made a diagnosis of the case," the doctor declared. "The man was conscious but couldn't seem to remember anything. He had no physical injuries."

At the hospital, attendants said Sutherland was sleeping. They said the identification seemed correct on the basis of papers he carried and the license on an automobile which was in the mud where Sutherland was found.

Jailer Crice said he was present when sheriff's officers questioned the coach. He said he kept saying "I'm Jock Sutherland." He could not explain how he happened to be in Ballard County and could not tell where he was going.

Jailer Crice added that identification also was established by papers carried by Dr. Sutherland.

(In Pittsburgh, a Steeler spokesman said the exact whereabouts of Sutherland was unknown. He said the coach was on an annual month-long vacation-business tour of the South, renewing contacts with coaches and looking over the new crop of football prospects. He was due home the last of April, the spokesman added.)

The coach was discovered by Bandana, Ky., residents who telephoned county officials that a "man was wading around in the mud" in a field near there. Authorities went to the scene and found Dr. Sutherland. His automobile was mired in a field nearby.

Jailer Crice said that Milton C. Anderson, a Wickliffe attorney, telephoned the University of Pittsburgh, where Dr. Sutherland formerly coached, and informed officials there of his condition. He then telephoned the Steelers' office.

DR. JOHN B. (JOCK) SUTHERLAND

It was understood unofficially that a high Steeler official was flying to Cairo. This report could not be immediately verified.

Crice said Sutherland appeared to be in a "dazed" condition as if he might be suffering from amnesia. He said that at times during the questioning Dr. Sutherland appeared to fall asleep, and sometimes seemed to be unaware of his surroundings.

Mims Loses In AAU Fight Semifinals

Boston, April 7.—Holly Mims, Washington's last surviving entry in the 1948 National AAU Boxing Championships, was eliminated in the semifinal round tonight by Joe Jarman, Dayton, Ohio, middleweight, who unanimously decisioned the District lad.

Mims, facing a sellout crowd of 14,000 in the Boston Garden, was too inexperienced to cope with the 24-year-old Ohioan, veteran of some 45 bouts, and stage fright prevented him from making his best showing. It was only Mims' eighth boxing match.

Jarman, who earlier in the tourney eliminated Eddie Marshall, another Washingtonian, used a left jab effectively to keep Mims constantly off balance. Strictly a counterpuncher, Mims couldn't get into his opponent often enough to do any damage.

Mims previously scored two victories in the tournament, which drew 166 of the finest amateur mittmen in the Nation. After drawing a first-round bye, Mims outpointed Pat Walsh, Portland, Oreg., in the second-round trials. In the quarterfinals, the Washington boy won, by TKO, from Dick Stagg, Norfolk, Va., after 1:00 of the first round.

Bus Werder Named Hoyas' Top Athlete

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Richard (Bus) Werder, Georgetown's burly guard, last night was named the school's outstanding senior athlete at the first postwar banquet of the "G" Club at the Mayflower Hotel.

Before more than 400, Werder was presented with a 21-jewel gold wrist watch by Joseph McFadden, "G" Club president.

Werder, 25-year-old Buffalo, N. Y., resident, already has signed a pro contract with the New York Yankees of the All-American Conference and will play for the College All-Stars against the Chicago Cardinals in Chicago next August.

The "G" club, composed of Georgetown monogram winners, also awarded a plaque to Frank O. Geiger, Newark, N. J., as the alumnus who contributed most to the promotion and success of athletics at the Hilltop.

Featured speakers were Bob Considine, famed sports columnist and writer, and Jack Lavelle, Notre Dame and New York Giants' scout. Considine, a native Washingtonian who began his brilliant career on The Washington Post, deviated from a flow of humorous remarks to describe a few of his experiences as a war correspondent.

Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, S. J., president of Georgetown, spoke and Charles J. Milton, chairman of the McDonough Memorial Gymnasium campaign, announced that $343,626 of the $800,000 goal had been collected.

Rev. Matthew W. Kane, S. J., faculty director of athletics, presented varsity letters to the following:

Another Title for Graziano—He's Top Polio Fund Donor

ROCKY GRAZIANO yesterday became the Nation's largest individual contributor of the "March of Dimes" polio fund when the local chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis received a check for $5916.99 from him.

The check represented Graziano's purse, less one dollar, for his bout here Monday against Sonny Horne. The middleweight champion received only one dollar for the fight and paid his own training expenses, which amounted to approximately $2000.

The presentation was made by Thomas P. Morgan, D. C. boxing commissioner, who turned over the check to Edgar Morris, chairman of the local March of Dimes campaign.

Commissioner Morgan also turned over a check for $1315.11 to the polio campaign, this amount contributed by Promoter Goldie Ahearn of the Liberty A. C., sponsor of Monday night's fight. Ahearn also presented a $1315.11 check to the Ladies Auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club.

The Washington "March of Dimes" sports committee has raised more than $10,000 this year, Morris said.

Keller Big 'If' as Yanks Break Camp

By Jack Hand

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 7 (AP). Charley Keller is the big "if" of the champion New York Yankees as they break camp today, with manager Bucky Harris expecting trouble from Boston, Cleveland and Detroit.

"You can't belittle Cleveland," said Harris, "especially since they added Russ Christopher. He'll be a handy man in the bullpen. Detroit figures to have great pitching. But Boston is the team.

"We're going to be all right. Our big if is Keller. He has been hitting the ball hard since he started to play but he hasn't cut loose running yet. I want him to take his time. Until we see him run hard we won't be sure."

Keller isn't sure either. He underwent a delicate operation for the removal of a disc from the base of his spine last July 18. He says he is waiting until after his first hard slide before he passes final judgment.

Rookies Aren't Hitting

If Keller is ready he will be in left, with Joe Dimaggio, fit and ready for a great season, in center and Tommy Henrich in right. Johnny Lindell will be in left if Keller can't make it.

Ed Stewart, a .358 hitter at Kansas City, and Cliff Mapes, a .308 slugger who drove in 117 runs for the same club, have failed to knock down any fences in the spring games.

George McQuinn will open the season on first after many spring experiments. Bobby Brown just didn't fit there. Steve Souchock broke his hand in an exhibition game, and Jack Phillips may need more experience. Souchock might have had a good chance but for his injury.

Brown a Reserve

George Stirnweiss at second, Phil Rizzuto at short and Bill Johnson at third will again round out the champions' infield, Frank Crosetti, back on the active list, and Brown, .300 hitter who can't break into the line-up, will be the reserves.

Yogi Berra will be the No. 1 catcher, with Gus Niarhos and Charles Silvera probably splitting the work against lefthanders.

The real Yankee strength is expected to be in pitching, with Ed Lopat and Red Embree added to the 1947 staff.

But Frank Shea, prize freshman last year, has been slow rounding into form. His control has been bad and he has been hit freely in recent starts. Allie Reynolds, last year's 19-game winner, also has had trouble with his control. Vic Raschi, who had a 7-2 record last year after his recall from Portland, will be the fifth starter.

Joe Page has worked himself into good condition for his bull pen chores, where he probably will be helped by Randy Gumpert and Karl Drews. Floyd (Bill) Bevens, who came so close to a no-hitter in the World Series last fall, has had arm trouble. He was sent to Johns Hopkins for an examination and has just been declared okay.

3 Straight Homers by Reds Sink Macks, 11-3

Tampa, Fla., April 7 (AP).—Three successive home runs by Grady Hatton, Hank Sauer and Babe Young in the fourth inning featured an 11-to-3 victory by the Cincinnati Reds over the Philadelphia Athletics today.

Tommy Hughes got off to a wobbly start as the A's fashioned three safeties, a walk, a passed ball and an error into three runs in the first inning. He allowed only one hit in the next four innings. Herman Wehmeier then took over and gave the Athletics only two hits.

Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler witnessed the game.

It was the first time since August, 1946, when he injured his arm, that Sanders had played first base. He had pinch-hit twice previously this spring.

'Power' Boys Favored in Masters Golf

By Chick Hosch

Augusta, Ga., April 7 (AP).—Soggy fairways led to the prediction today that few players will finish under par in the Masters Golf Tournament which starts tomorrow.

Since the formal practice rounds started Sunday, it has been evident that the game's longest hitters will have the advantage over the 6800-yard National Country Club course. Heading that list is Chick Harbert.

Generally, it is agreed that a score of 284 will be good enough to win. Bobby Locke, the South African star and one of the top favorites, is among those picking that four-under par total as good enough.

However, in the past 11 events, such a score would have won only three times, and since 1938 that aggregate has been no better than third except in the 1940 event. Then Lloyd Mangrum was second, four strokes behind Jimmy Demaret's 280.

Harbert, besides being the game's longest hitter, has had the best practice scores. He posted 65, 66, 68 and 69 on separate occasions and then played nine holes in 31, 5 under par.

Besides Harbert, others entered who are noted for their driving prowess are Sam Snead, Ske-Riegel and Skip Alexander.

Riegel and Byrd Open

Riegel and Sam Byrd will open the 72-hole competition tomorrow for a field of 57 when they tee off at 11:30 a. m. (EST). The final round of the $10,000 event, in which Demaret is the defending champion, is set for Sunday.

Besides Locke, the presence of Henry Cotton, British Ryder Cup veteran, adds an international flavor to the occasion. Cotton has shown up well in practice, averaging one or two under par every day. He skipped today's final practice round to "sharpen up my game around the greens."

Mangrum, leading money winner on the winter tour, is quoted at 6 to 1 in the betting odds. Demaret, Locke, Ben Hogan and Byron Nelson are listed at 5 to 1.

Pros Adopt USGA Rules

Augusta, Ga., April 7 (AP).—Professional tournament golf beginning today will be played in accordance with rules sanctioned by the United States Golf Association.

President Ed Dudley of the Professional Golf Association announced the change in policy last night at a dinner in his and Fielding Wallace's honor. Wallace is president of the USGA. Dudley said the decision was reached last night at a meeting of the PGA executive committee.

Farm Hands Cash In on 4 Errors to Whip Griffs

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., April 7.—The Nats' five-game winning streak in Florida was intrusted today to their junior varsity, and no trust was ever more misplaced. The Chattanooga Lookouts whupped 'em, 4 to 2, and with some ease.

Pitcher Sid Hudson and Third Baseman Eddie Yost were the only regulars in the Nats' starting lineup. The Nats outhit their country cousins from Chattanooga, 10 to 7, but somewhere along the line they were outlicked in the matter of runs.

Hal Toenes, a pitcher who wasn't good enough for the Nats, was too good for 'em today. He dueled Hudson for six innings and left the game tied up 2-2. Another righthander, Alex Zukowski, shut the Nats out in the seventh, eighth and ninth.

Infield Collapses

Young Dick Welteroth was the losing pitcher, but you can't prove it by his pitching. He relieved Hudson after six innings, worked two, didn't allow a hit or an earned run, and was charged with the defeat. Everybody in the Nats' infield except Shortstop Johnny Sullivan made an error in the seventh inning when the Lookouts came up with the two winning runs on no hits.

All told, the Nats tossed four errors into the game.

Hudson was not rapped as hard as the seven hits he allowed in six innings indicate. He gave up a run in the opening inning on solid blows by Scott and Mirande, and he yielded another in the fourth after Stokes beat out a scratch hit. Pitcher Toenes moved the run home, however, with a very unscratchy three-bagger to right.

One Run Unearned

Mark Christman singled to right, stole second, moved to third on Yost's infield hit and scored on Okrie's long fly for the Nats' run, in the fifth. Their other run was unearned. Yost walked, took second when Toenes threw wild on a pick-off play and eventually was fetched home by Pinch-hitter Sherry Robertson, who singled to right.

The Circus Starts

The Nats looked like the country cousins in the seventh when Welteroth took the mound. He walked the first batter and First Baseman Christman bobbled a pick-up throw that moved the winning run to second. Yost made a wild throw on Clark's grounder, and the run moved home. Clark took second, went to third on a long fly and scored when Lyons booted a ground ball.

YOUNG SAM MEEKS, who started the game at shortstop for the Nats, was forced to retire in the fifth on account of heat sickness. He singled to right in that inning and was near collapse after scampering to third on Drake's double that followed . . . The day was a scorcher, hottest the Nats have seen in their 13 years in Orlando . . . Eddie Yost was forced out of the game in the seventh inning when a bad-hopping ground ball struck him painfully in the groin . . . Rookie Dick Welteroth, after pitching two hitless innings, was relieved by Cuban Ramon Garcia, who also pitched hitless ball for an inning . . . They are the top rookie pitchers still with the club, and are battling to be retained when the squad is cut to 25, on May 19 . . . The Nats have new plans for Jay Difani, whose third basing hasn't impressed them. They like his hitting potential and today they started him in left field . . . He doubled and singled sharply in four trips to the plate . . . Tomorrow: Chattanooga again at Tinker Field, in the Nats' last Florida game before breaking camp Friday night.

Louis Prima's Pennymaker Is Second

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., April 7.—Old Guy Bedwell, who was saddling winners when most of the current owners and trainers were swinging on gates, sent his Torchator postward today and the colt won the twentieth running of the $7500 added Bowie Kindergarten.

The son of Lassator and May Torch was a driving winner by a half length to break a four-race winning streak of Louie Prima's Pennymaker. Another half length back came Mrs. M. Gunther's Manda's Man to be third in the field of eight.

One Second Off Record

Torchator, coholder of the half-mile record at Santa Anita, was a favorite—and paid $4.80. His time of .47 3/5 was a second off the track record held by Too High.

A crowd of 11,000 saw Bedwell's colt make his Eastern debut. The owner-trainer, who lost several topflight horses, including Prognosis, in the swamp fever epidemic last year, purchased Lassator in California. There, he reversed his usual procedure. Generally he has taken Maryland horses West to win.

The 2-year-olds were away to a good start with Manda's Man, a longshot, flattering his backers by going to the front. However, Pennymaker and Torchator were close up.

Entering the stretch, Torchator saved ground, a fact that had much to do with his victory. Manda's Man and Pennymaker both went wide. In the final drive, Torchator held on to his lead but was an all-out horse at the end.

His Third Straight Win

Pennymaker came on gamely in the final test as did Manda's Man. The others in the field were not prominent with some of them appearing not too energetically handled.

The race brought winnings of $6250 to Torchator who now has $13,125 to show for his four wins in six tries. The victory was his third in a row.

The program opened on a big money downbeat. Mary Page's Artro, a Sunshine Park horse, won at $141.40 in the first race. When M. Kahlbaum's Good Sun took the second at $7.20 there was a $675.20 payoff on the daily double combination of 3 and 9.

Joe Camac was the training star of the day, saddling three winners—Mr. Buster, Naval Base and Burra Peg.

Eastern Beats Anacostia in Track

Forest Miles scored firsts in the 100-yard and 200-yard dashes to lead Eastern High to its second straight track victory yesterday, a 91-27 triumph over Anacostia at the winners' oval.

Phils Buy Dick Sisler

Clearwater, Fla., April 7 (U.P.).—The Philadelphia Phillies today traded Shortstop Ralph La Pointe and about $20,000 to the St. Louis Cardinals for first-baseman Dick Sisler.

The deal provided the Phillies with a regular first baseman who is a long ball hitter and it gave the Cards shortstop insurance for Marty Marion, who has been bothered this spring by a leg ailment.

Sisler, 26-year-old son of the famed George Sisler—first base star of yesteryear, was the key man in the deal. A left-handed batsman, he understudied Stan Musial at first for the Cards last year and batted .203.

Sisler had been slated to play first regularly for St. Louis this year with Musial returning to the outfield. Today's deal, however, was taken to mean that Musial would once again be at first for the Cards.

Wilson Routed By Mt. Vernon

Lefty Newman Shifflett held the Wilson Green Tigers to four hits yesterday as his Mount Vernon High teammates pounded out a 10-0 victory at Wilson Stadium.

It was the third straight win for the Mounts. The loss was the first for Wilson.

The Mounts collected all 7 hits and 10 runs off Dean Maury, who pitched the first 6 1/3 innings for Wilson. Maury might have fared better if his infield hadn't committed six errors, four of them during Mount Vernon's five-run seventh inning.

Page Thompson and Shifflett paced the Mount Vernon attack with two hits each, one of Thompson's blows going for two bases. Shifflett exhibited near perfect mound control, walking one and striking out eight. Bob Riely garnered two of Wilson's four singles.

Mathews Drives in 5 Eli Runs

Second Baseman Dick Mathews batted in five runs for Yale at College Park yesterday as the Blue nosed out Maryland 6-5.

Mathews' triple in the eighth inning with the bases full enabled Yale to overcome a two-run deficit and score a victory in its only Washington area appearance this season.

The Terps are host to Villanova today at 3 o'clock.

Yale grabbed a two-run lead in the first inning on singles by Art Moher and Tom Redden, a sacrifice by Mathews and an outfield fly by Paul Russ.

The Terps tied the game at two-all in the fourth when Jim Moeller and Bob Brewer singled and Gene Emsweller drove them home with a double to right. Maryland went ahead, 4-2, in the sixth with singles by Emsweller, John Condon and Ed Crescenze. Condon scored on an overthrow to first by Art Moher.

Shortstop Brewer added an insufficient run for Maryland in the eighth with a home run into deep center.

Middies Win, 5-4, On Buck's Hit in 9th

Annapolis, Md., April 7 (AP).—Roger Buck's line single with two men out drove Pinch Runner Fred Bixby across the plate in the ninth inning today to give the Navy baseball team a 5-4 win over Villanova.

Navy had gone into the inning on the short end of a 4-3 score.

Eddie Armstrong led off the Navy half of the ninth by beating out a bunt. Bill Hawkins, pinch hitting for Cari Goodiel, was hit on the hand by a pitched ball. Andy Frahlee walked, filling the bases. Then Pete Boney drew a walk from Villanova's Bobby Green to force in the tying run.

Bill Brendle popped up, making it two out. Then Buck came through with his game winning single.

Weather Halts Coolidge Again

For the third time in less than a week, Calvin Coolidge High's baseball, tennis and golf teams yesterday postponed a scheduled trip to Woodberry Forest (Va.) Academy.

The trip, originally slated for last Thursday, was postponed until the next day because of rain. It rained Friday, too. Because of yesterday's threatening weather, Coolidge tentatively moved the trip back until Monday, but the tennis team played Episcopal.

3136 From Area Are Nonpaying D. C. Students

Report on Tuition Given School Board; Action on Teacher Pay Increase Asked

More than 3000 students who live outside the District are attending local schools without paying for their education, the Board of Education was told yesterday.

Schools Supt. Hobart M. Corning said that there are 2694 exempt from tuition under present law and 442 who are not paying because their status under the law cannot be determined.

The board, which received the report at its bi-monthly meeting, also voted to ask Congress to include teachers in any cost-of-living pay raise given Government workers and to grant teachers sick leave.

The board reaffirmed its policy of building new schools in areas where children are on part-time before seeking funds for replacing outmoded but not overcrowded buildings.

Students are exempt from tuition under the 1948 District Appropriations Act if they were enrolled in District schools before July 25, 1947, and if their parents at the time were employed in the District.

End to Exemptions Asked

The board at its meeting March 17 asked Congress for a law ending all exemptions after July 1.

The sick leave proposal would grant teachers 10 days a year for illness and emergencies cumulative to 60 days.

Teachers now have no sick leave and must pay for substitutes when absent.

The board also voted to ask Congress to end an "inquiry" in the pay law which gives a teacher entering the school system more money than a teacher already employed.

The board informed the Southwest Citizens Association that it cannot give priority to a replacement for the Amidon, Fairbrother and Greenleaf Schools until it acquires buildings to place all part-time students on full-time programs.

The Commissioners were asked by the board to proceed at once on estimates of the cost of developing playgrounds at the Richardson and Slowe Schools.

Other Actions

In other actions the board:

Requested the Commissioners to draw up a contract to send Mary Louise Arnold, 11-year-old girl who is almost totally blind and deaf, to the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind next September.

Received a report from Board Member Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith that District school children raised $2793 to purchase Braille slates for blind children overseas. The fund raising followed a visit to the schools and an appeal by Helen Keller.

Retired two teachers with long service records. Mrs. Genevieve B. Dalton, 1120 Girard st. nw., domestic arts teacher at Francis Junior High School, was retired after 20 years, and Miss Marion E. Craig, 4514 Connecticut ave. nw., mathematics teacher at Gordon Junior High School, after 36 years.

PSC Postpones Capital Transit Rate Increase

Baltimore, April 7 (AP).—The Maryland Public Service Commission ordered another postponement today in the Capital Transit Co.'s proposed rate increase for its Maryland operations.

The Washington utility's new rates would have become effective tomorrow unless a contrary decision were handed down by the PSC. The agency pushed the deadline ahead to May 8, another 30 days. It said it did so because it needed more time to arrive at its final decision.

'Real Romance'

Sen. Tobey To Wed D. C. Ex-Teacher

Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) announced yesterday he was engaged to a former Washington school teacher, who writes poetry in her spare time.

She is Mrs. Loretta Rabenhorst, mother of three grown sons and also a grandmother. She said she met the 67-year-old veteran legislator while clerking behind a candy and cigar counter at the Dodge Hotel, 20 E st. nw. Both live there.

"It was a whirlwind romance," the petite, gray-haired woman, who reluctantly confessed to being in her fifties, confided. "It's only since February that things have gotten serious."

Senator Tobey's wife died about a year ago. Mrs. Rabenhorst was divorced from her husband, William E. Rabenhorst, 1801 Kearny st. ne., several years ago. He has since remarried.

Mrs. Rabenhorst described the chairman of the Senate Banking Committee and former Governor of New Hampshire as a "very romantic person." She said their courtship was a "real romance . . . we both felt very sure right from the first."

She said, however, that the marriage would not take place for several months. No date has been set.

A native of Washington, Mrs. Rabenhorst was graduated from Central High School here and Wilson Teachers College. She taught at John Burroughs School here for 18 years, most of the time the third and fourth grades.

"The Senator and I have a mutual interest in children—he has six grandchildren and I have five—and he likes poetry too," Mrs. Rabenhorst said.

One of her poems, called "April's Mischief," begins:

"Snow came down in April
Blowing willy-nilly
Made the startled robins
Seem positively silly."

The Senator's bride-to-be said she has written a number of children's stories, under the name Loretta Capell, and has had several published.

Mrs. Rabenhorst said she gave up teaching about six years ago because of ill health and shortly afterwards took a part-time job at the Dodge Hotel as a sales clerk. It was there that she became acquainted with Senator Tobey and his wife.

She has a sister in Washington, Mrs. Philip A. Wright, 215 Rock Creek Church rd., and a son, Daniel Robenhorst, 319 Branch dr., Silver Spring.

Tobey, a native of Roxbury, Mass., was speaker of the New Hampshire House and president of the State Senate before becoming Governor. He was elected to the House of Representatives for three successive terms and came to the Senate in November, 1938.

Charles W. Hume, Broker, to Wed London Divorcee

Charles W. Hume, 48, investment broker here, and Mrs. Catherine M. C. Ramsden, London divorcee, obtained a marriage license in New York yesterday, the Associated Press reported last night.

Hume

They did not specify where or when they would be wed.

Hume, of 2122 California st. nw., operates an investment brokerage business at 917 15th st. nw. Mrs. Ramsden, 40, of London, England, was divorced from St. John Maur Ramsden last March 12.

At Hume's home last night his mother told reporters her son had never been married, and that he met Mrs. Ramsden in Washington. Her son, she said, went to New York several days ago to meet Mrs. Ramsden when she arrived on the Queen Elizabeth.

Church Programs Of Prayer, Action For Peace Urged

Individual churches were urged to sponsor programs of prayer, study and action for peace at American Protestant Church leaders ended an emergency peace conference here last night.

The suggestion was made by Stanley I. Stuber, publicity director for the Northern Baptist Convention. The conference was held at the Washington City Church of the Brethren, 4th st. and North Carolina ave. se.

The conference also heard Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), who said legislators need more information on foreign affairs. Johnson said he was preparing a bill which would set up a bipartisan committee on basic information that would act as a clearing house for international information.

Labor Law Veto Brings Support For Truman

An indorsement of President Truman for reelection—in appreciation for his veto of the Taft-Hartley Act—has been voted by the newly formed Maryland State and District of Columbia Labor League for Political Education.

This was announced yesterday by Frank J. Coleman, secretary of the new group, who said the indorsement was the first for Truman by an similar American Federation of Labor unit.

The AFL several months ago authorized establishment of the labor leagues across the country to oppose members of Congress who voted for the Taft-Hartley Act.

Coleman said the indorsement by the Maryland and District of Columbia league, headed by Harry Cohen of Baltimore, who is also president of the Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor, was a unanimous action at a meeting here Tuesday night.

'Thank-You' Letters Get Free Reading

Students at the Janney Elementary School yesterday sat down with three linguists and heard for the first time the thank-you notes sent them from children overseas.

Thus was launched a public service which the Society of Federal Translators now is preparing to make available to individuals here who receive letters from Europe in response to packages and other charitable remittances.

The letters received at the Janney Elementary School were in response to packages sent abroad by the school's Junior Red Cross Service Club, under the direction of Mrs. Robert L. Flather.

Those translated yesterday all came from France. One boy wrote that he had received a ball which he had given to his little sister because she had lost hers.

Another French child, a girl, said that with the contents of the package she had received she was planning neighborhood parties "where we can play with the toys."

The three members of the Society of Federal Translators who went to the Janney School yesterday emphasized the fact that the offer of translation does not extend to large "backlogs" of letters.

Persons who wish to take advantage of the service may send their letters to Mrs. Gladys I. Clark, corresponding secretary of the society, at 701 Dupont Circle Building, 1344 Connecticut ave. nw., Washington, 6, D. C., enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Earl R. Hewitt, chairman of the special committee of the society which is handling the project, said yesterday that it is designed solely as a "good-will" effort for those who lack foreign language knowledge.

The Gold Star Wives of America yesterday opened national headquarters at 1740 K st. nw. for a campaign for congressional enactment of a program of legislation designed to aid war widows and orphans.

5-Man Group Named to Plan Hospital Drive

Father McNally Heads Committee on Proposed Deficit Campaign

A five-member committee was named yesterday to further plans for a fund-raising campaign for private hospitals in Greater Washington.

Named to head the committee was the Rev. Paul A. McNally, dean of Georgetown University Medical School.

The committee was formed in a closed meeting of the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area at Garfield Hospital. Purpose of the meeting was to receive definite commitments from hospitals planning to join the proposed drive for $750,000 or more.

It was learned that several hospitals balked at joining until definite plans for the campaign, including the method of disbursing receipts, had been agreed on.

The campaign was proposed by the council, an advisory body, to meet specific deficits incurred in care of partial-pay patients.

At a meeting last week, Arkell B. Cook, administrator of Garfield Hospital, reported that 1947 loss to 10 private hospitals from non-tax-exempt (low-salaried) patients totaled $726,845.

The hospitals included Casualty, Children's, Columbia, Emergency, Episcopal, Garfield, George Washington, Georgetown, Providence and Arlington.

Hillside Citizens to Meet

Covenant of 1907 Blocks 140-Unit D. C. Project; Edict on Slums Upheld

Chevy Chase Pact Is Held Effective Despite Zone Laws

The 1907 pact restricts building in the original subdivision to residences—"one to a lot and to cost not less than $3500."

Justice F. Dickinson Letts ruled the covenant still holds precedence over newer zoning regulations and the plans of the St. Lo Construction Co., Inc., to build the apartment house in the area.

His ruling granted a permanent injunction to Lawrence Koenigsberger, the District's one-man Board of Tax Appeals, and his wife, Irene, 3749 McKinley st. nw.

Mr. and Mrs. Koenigsberger brought the action as private citizens, but said the injunction request represented the wishes of numerous citizens in that area.

The proposed eight-story apartment would contain 140 units in addition to shops. According to court documents, J. G. Geldman, president of the construction company, paid $68,000 for the property, once the site of the McReynolds home at Connecticut ave. and Northampton st. nw.

The area, bounded by Connecticut ave., Chevy Chase pkwy., Chevy Chase Circle and Morrison st., was zoned for residential-C, which would permit apartment houses. In 1945, it was zoned for stores and shops.

Attorney for the construction company said "times have changed at Chevy Chase since 1907," adding that more stores are needed.

Justice Letts, referring to the ruling of Justice Jennings Bailey on the McReynolds petition in 1944, cited the covenant and added "there has been no change in the circumstances."

Blue Plains Food Budget Adequate, Clapp Declares

Officials at the Blue Plains Home for the Aged and Infirm should be able to serve adequate meals with present food appropriations, Acting Welfare Director Raymond Clapp said yesterday.

He said a report to this effect would be forwarded to Commissioner Guy Mason tomorrow for transmittal to Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.). Miller, after visiting the home Monday, sent a letter to Mason suggesting that Otto J. Cass, home superintendent, be permitted to set up his own food budget.

He said officials at the home reported the inmates received insufficient food because of budget limitations imposed by the acting welfare director.

Clapp said Cass was satisfied with only a 5-cent increase when daily appropriations at other welfare institutions were raised from 51 to 63 cents last month.

1947 Income Study

20% of D. C. Families Get Under $2311

Families whose income ranked in the lowest 20 per cent here made a maximum of $2310 last year, the Bureau of the Census revealed yesterday.

Median (middle bracket) income for all families in the District during 1947 was $3825, a sample survey conducted by the bureau in February for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission determined.

Its purpose was to find the highest total income a family could make and still be eligible for low-cost public housing under the D. C. Redevelopment Act of 1945. The act provides that only families whose income falls in the lowest 20 per cent here can qualify.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said the principal value of the survey at present—since no slum clearance funds have been appropriated by Congress—is to provide a basis for "reopening the whole question" of who should be eligible.

"It is probable there will be considerable argument sooner or later for changing that (lowest 20 per cent) basis," he predicted.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, NCPPC chairman, said the top income figure for eligible families will be standard "until economic conditions are such that another survey is made."

So far, Congress has appropriated $75,000 for NCPPC to set up a comprehensive slum clearance plan. Additional planning funds are being considered by House-Senate conferees. Congress rejected, however, a request for $3,400,000 to begin slum clearance under the District Redevelopment Land Agency.

The Bureau of the Census said its "sample" consisted of 1830 families in approximately 2200 dwelling units, representing "a cross section of families in private households and lodging houses and resident families of hotels."

J. C. Capt, director of the Bureau of the Census, said "some additional tabulations of income by housing characteristics" are planned for both the District and the metropolitan area.

Soroptimist Aid Asked to Help Cut Automobile Toll

The plea came from Norman Damon, vice president of the Automotive Safety Foundation, at a luncheon address in Hotel Willard.

Women can assist in two ways, Damon said, by "example" and by "their contribution to an articulate and informed public opinion." He said "we will all be approaching our goal when we take as much pride in a good community safety record as we do in good school, or health or fire protection facilities."

Court Supports Ruling Southwest Houses Are 'Unfit'

The District's condemnation of 11 slum dwellings from 121 and 141 P st. sw., inclusive, as "unfit to live in" was upheld forcefully in District Court yesterday.

Justice Matthew F. McGuire, in refusing to set aside the order, disclosed he had personally inspected the property and added:

"I find the board for the condemnation of insanitary buildings acted properly. Indeed, if it did otherwise on what the court saw of the premises, it would be derelict in its duty."

Action to vacate the condemnation order was brought by the property owner, Miss Minnie Keyes, 714 7th st. sw., who, in 1945 was granted extension of time to make the dwellings conform to sanitary requirements.

The board, composed of Col. Kenneth E. Madsen, Robert H. Davis and Col. William H. Cary, jr., described the shacks as not only unsanitary, but "unsafe."

Tenants were moved out last fall. Assistant Corporation Counsels Milton D. Korman and Oliver Gasch said the District has the power to order the property razed.

In another similar action in Municipal Court, Rudolph Behrend, real estate man and attorney with offices at 715 7th st. nw., was given a 30-day extension to improve property from 1842 to 1850 7th st. nw. The board termed the dwellings insanitary.

Behrend was fined $150 Monday for insanitary and unsafe condition of dwellings from 1032 to 1040 6th st. ne.

Tenant Claims He Got 3-Day Move Notice

Wolter

Dr. Frederick F. Wolter, German-born American citizen who claims three degrees from the University of New Zealand, declared he knew nothing of the court proceedings until an order from the United States marshal's office reached him by mail last Saturday.

The order said a writ of possession would be executed on Tuesday at 10 a. m., when Dr. Wolter would have to move out. This was delayed so he could see a lawyer but he found there was nothing he could do and he will be put out any day now.

Court records sow that the landlady, Mrs. Jacqueline S. Ellis, asked for possession of his room for her own use. A hearing was set for February 11 in Municipal Court, and a summons for the hearing was tacked to Dr. Wolter's door, according to the records. This is the customary procedure in such cases. Dr. Wolter says he never saw such a notice although he was waiting for it, as Mrs. Ellis had previously informed him she wanted him to move out.

Mrs. Ellis told The Washington Post she needed the room because she was living in two rooms with her two children.

Radio on Trolleys Wins Straw Vote

Tuneful transportation, designed to replace traffic cacophony with radio music, has won a straw vote victory with Washington bus and streetcar customers.

Capital Transit Co.'s weeklong experiment with soft strains and few commercials on one bus line and one streetcar route drew 3621 comments—fortissimo. Company officials announced yesterday 92 per cent of the riders favored the idea, providing it doesn't cost any extra. It wouldn't

The reactions were as varied as one would expect from a cross-section poll. Some wanted race results; others Rachmaninoff.

Another didn't want music, but favored earplugs if the idea goes through. "I hate music," he wrote. "Streetcars are the only places you don't have to listen to radio."

Among those who lauded the plan was one who oberved "music makes for better spirits among all."

Hostesses were on duty during the polling on the bus and streetcar lines. Wrote one rider:

"Give us more hostesses."

Ninas

Ninas, who retired in 1943 as assistant to the general counsel, General Accounting Office, had been in ill health since he suffered a paralytic stroke last fall. His home was in Gaithersburg.

Police quoted H. Coffelt, Brunswick, Md., a B. & O. brakeman, as saying he saw Ninas standing in the tracks and shouted a warning.

Two other witnesses, Benjamin A. Buchanan, watchman at the crossing, and Arthur Ward, both of Gaithersburg, said they saw the victim step off the tracks after the shouted warning. A moment later, they said, he returned to his former position in the path of the fast-moving train, stepping from behind several freight cars on a siding.

J. H. Orme, station agent at Gaithersburg, said the body was dragged about 75 yards. Ninas, he said, had "been coming down to the station for several days to watch the trains go by."

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County coroner, said he would withhold issuance of a death certificate pending further study of Ninas medical history.

Born in Concordia, Mo., Ninas served in the Spanish-American War and in 1905 went to Panama as chief clerk to the governor of the Canal Zone.

In 1914 he came to Washington as chief clerk to the late William C. Gorgas, then Army Surgeon General. He was later commissioned a captain in the Quartermaster Corps and during World War I served on the General Staff here.

In 1917 he received a law degree from National University. He entered the General Accounting Office in 1919. Beside his wife, Hattie, 70, he leaves a son, George A. Ninas, jr., 109 Allan rd. nw.

Florence Muck Of Nebraska Dies Visiting D. C. Sister

Miss Florence Muck, 37, of Wynot, Nebr., died unexpectedly yesterday in an apartment at 4929 1st st. nw., where she was visiting her sister.

According to homicide squad detectives, her body was found by her sister, Mrs. Margaret Harris, a Government employe, who said she had returned to the apartment around 2 p. m. because she was worried over the fact that Miss Muck had complained of being ill earlier in the day. She was pronounced dead by Dr. Andrew Tessitore of Casualty Hospital.

An autopsy will be held today to determine the exact cause of death, although police said Miss Muck apparently died of a heart attack.

GU Watchman Fatally Stricken While on Rounds

John Thomas Horigan, 60, newly appointed Georgetown University watchman, was pronounced dead at Georgetown Hospital at 7:05 p. m. yesterday, two hours after he collapsed while making his rounds.

Dulany Binns, 3317 P st. nw., another watchman, was "breaking Horigan in" when he collapsed on the fourth floor of Ryan Hall, at 37th and O sts. nw.

According to police, Horigan was released from Emergency Hospital two weeks ago, after more than a month's treatment for a heart condition and cirrhosis of the liver.

Binns said Horigan collapsed just after climbing up three flights of stairs. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Louis Fauteaux.

Cardinal Gibbons' Silver Set Stolen From Late Home

Baltimore, April 7 (AP).—Silverware which once belonged to the late James Cardinal Gibbons was stolen today.

Burglars entered the home of Archbishop Francis P. Keough of the Baltimore Diocese. Desks in the house adjacent to the cathedral were ransacked but only the silverware was taken. All of it bore the initials and coat of arms of Cardinal Gibbons.

The missing items were listed as a water pitcher, an old-fashioned water boiler, a soup tureen with cover, a dozen ice cream spoons and a dozen soup spoons. They were valued at more than $1200.

The silver had been presented by the mayor and council of Baltimore upon the twenty-fifth anniversary of Cardinal Gibbons' receiving his red hat.

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Rep. Zimmerman

Representative Orville Zimmerman, Missouri Democrat, was stricken and died unexpectedly yesterday at about 12:30 p. m. in his office.

The 67-year-old Congressman, thought by his friends and office force to be in good health, collapsed as he left his office to go to the House floor. He was pronounced dead by Dr. George W. Calver, congressional physician, who was summoned.

Although his associates believed Mr. Zimmerman to be in "excellent health" and disclosed that he had played golf with colleagues on Tuesday, Dr. Calver said he had been under observation for a heart condition for many months.

Cannon Informs House

Representative Clarence Cannon (D.), dean of the Missouri congressional delegation, informed the House of Mr. Zimmerman's death.

The House put aside its duties and heard tributes paid the dead Congressman. A resolution expressing "profound sorrow" over the death of the Congressman was adopted and Speaker Martin appointed a committee of four—Representatives Cannon, Bell, Short and Banta, all of Missouri—to represent the House at funeral rites. The House then adjourned for the day.

Similar tribute was paid to Representative Zimmerman on the floor of the Senate when his death was announced by Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.).

Representative Zimmerman was the twelfth member of the Eightieth Congress to die in office. His death leaves four vacancies in the House, two from Republican and two from Democratic districts.

Served Since 1934

A member of Congress continuously since the Seventy-fourth Congress in 1934, Representative Zimmerman is survived by his wife, the former Adah G. Hemphill, whom he married in 1919, and a son, First Lieut. Joe A. Zimmerman, a medical officer with the United States occupation forces in Austria.

Arrangements for returning the body to Kennett, Mo., home of the Congressman, for burial, were held in abeyance pending the son's return by plane.

Representative Zimmerman was to have picked up tickets yesterday afternoon for an airline flight to Sikeston, Mo. He and Representative Cooley (D., Mo.) were scheduled to attend a Jackson-Jefferson Day dinner there tonight. Cooley was with his colleague when he was fatally stricken.

The dead Congressman was a member of the House Agriculture Committee. In Congress he was a staunch supporter of legislation backed by Presidents Roosevelt and Truman.

Turned Wallace's Picture

He was born on a farm in Bollinger County, Mo., December 31, 1880, and was graduated from the Southeast Missouri State Teachers College in 1904. From 1904 to 1908 he was principal of the Dexter (Mo.) High School, then he turned his attention to law.

He received his law degree at the University of Missouri, in 1911 and that same year was admitted to the bar and began law practice in Kennett.

He enlisted in the Army and was a private in World War I.

His fraternal affiliations included the Lions Club, the American Legion and the Masonic order. He was a Methodist and a member of the board of regents of the teachers college from which he was graduated in 1904.

To Honor Bride-Elect

Miss Truman Will Give White House Luncheon

By Elizabeth Maguire

MISS MARGARET TRUMAN will entertain at a luncheon at the White House on Friday for Miss Betty Buchanan. Miss Truman plans to be one of Miss Buchanan's bridesmaids, when the latter is married to Stancliff Churchill Elmore on June 12. The wedding will take place in St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, and a reception will follow at the 1925 F Street Club.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bell Buchanan of Washington. She and Miss Truman became friends while classmates at Gunston Hall. Mr. Elmore is formerly of Alabama. He is the son of Mrs. Wilbur Gray of Washington.

After the luncheon on Friday, Mrs. Truman will accompany her mother to a reception given by White House aides. It will be the first such fete since before the war. Official guests and friends of the aides will be entertained from 6 to 8 at the home of Col. Godfrey McHugh and Maj. William Zimmermann.

To Attend Follies

It was announced at Mrs. Truman's press conference yesterday that Mrs. Truman and Margaret will also attend the Junior League Follies at Lisner Auditorium on Friday. It will be the end of a gala two days, as the First Lady and her daughter will accompany the President to the dinner which the Prince Regent of Belgium will give this evening at the Belgian Embassy.

Yesterday Mrs. Truman had a tea for members of the B'nai B'rith Women's Supreme Council, now holding their annual meeting in Washington, and last evening Mrs. Truman and Margaret attended the press preview of the film "State of the Union" at the Capitol Theater.

Today Mrs. Truman will receive over 100 members of the Theta Sigma Phi—a national journalistic sorority—at 1:30 o'clock, and at 3 o'clock she will receive foreign students who are studying in Washington. On Saturday she will have a lunch, followed by a movie, for House and Senate and Supreme Court page boys.

The First Lady will go to Mrs. George Mesta's house on Saturday afternoon, for the tea for the house and embassy tour.

Francis Thomases Entertain For Congressional Couple

By Marie McNair

MAJORITY Leader Charles Halleck, Representative from Indiana, and Mrs. Halleck, and Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. Thomas of Washington, have been friends over a long period of years. So it was a happy inspiration of the Thomases to give their party yesterday for their old friends.

Lawmakers and legislators were predominant in the group, but as Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have lived all their lives in the Capital, their friends were representative from all circles.

The two ladies standing together to welcome guests looked for all the world like tin-types of another era. Both wore their hair demurely close, both had full-skirted frocks, ankle length. Mrs. Thomas wore rustling deep blue taffeta and Mrs. Halleck's gown under soft lights looked like pleated sheer black crepe over stiff white taffeta. Representative Halleck and Mr. Thomas refused to stand in line but could usually be found nearby.

From the bar set up in the sun room it was but a step through French doors to the garden with its flagstone walks and terrace. Yet there were few souls who ventured outdoors under the heavy hanging skies.

Getting around from group to group were Representative Everett Dirksen, Judge and Mrs. Dickinson Letts, Tom Brahaney and his pretty daughter, Mrs. Edmund Lloyd, in a black and white print suit, and Dr. Edward Thomas, a noted surgeon.

Former Senator D. Worth Clark was there with Mrs. Clark, who wore a black satin frock with a hat fashioned of black satin petals, and others were Judge and Mrs. Joseph R. Jackson, A. Lee Wiggins, Acting Secretary of the Treasury, who had his daughter, Elizabeth, with him, the latter in a black and white print worn with a shiny black straw hat; Lawrence Ritchie, Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith, Mrs. Robert V. Fleming.

Mrs. Tom Clark, with her husband, the Attorney General, wore a flaring brown taffeta jacket suit, a brown straw hat draped with beige chiffon.

Speaker of the House Joe Martin, in dinner jacket, was among the many who seemed to be going on to another party. Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross, and Mrs. Ross wearing a halo hat of bright flowers, came early and were soon on their way with a crowded schedule to keep. The Leslie Biffles were bound for another fete, and Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim promised to stop in at Mr. and Mrs. Ken Watson's house before going home to received guests for dinner.

Edgar Morris and Mrs. Morris were there, and Mrs. Robert Olds in shining black satin and a becoming white felt hat. Mrs. Ray Henle popped in wearing a big natural straw hat with great loops of striped ribbons.

Couple Returns After Honeymoon Spent in Europe

Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Neuland, who have just returned from a six-week honeymoon in Europe, were guests of honor at a buffet supper given last week by Mr. Neuland's sister, Mrs. Ira L. Ewers. The bride is the former Mrs. Joanne Noone Smith.

The wedding took place on February 14 in Vienna, Austria, where Mrs. Neuland had served with the American Legation. The Rev. Bartholomew Rubatscher of Salzburg, Austria, performed the ceremony in the court chapel of the former Hapsburg Palace, and the reception followed at the Jockey Club in the Pallavicini Palace.

The newlyweds will reside in Washington, where Mr. Neuland is with the Central Intelligence Agency.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Ardently Affectionate in Marriage, Couple Never Kissed in Brief Courtship and Wife Keeps Husband on the Defensive About This

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Can you say anything to make my wife understand that a man can love a girl without kissing her before marriage?

We are very demonstrative in our affection for each other; but we married after a brief courtship and during that time we didn't feel sufficiently well acquainted—or perhaps we were too timid—to kiss and pet as most couples do before marriage.

My wife seems regretful about this now; and when she sees engaged couples parked along moonlit roads, kissing and embracing, she says, "It is too bad we missed all this fun."

He Kissed Girls Who Were Bolder

ALSO she has heard that I kissed other girls long before meeting her; and she thinks and says that if I had really loved her before marriage as much as I do now, I would have kissed her no matter how bashful and reticent she seemed.

It is true that I had kissed other girls, but somehow they seemed bolder. My wife was so diffident and reserved, she concealed her feelings so well before marriage, that I couldn't feel free to kiss her.

After marriage we both lost our self-consciousness and became very affectionate; but now my wife says, "If only we could have kissed like this before marriage, how thrilling it would have been." And she insists that I must have loved other girls more than her before we married, just because I kissed them and not her. Does this make sense? A. B.

Peculiar Taint To Wife's Views

DEAR A. B.: What ought to be said to your wife, to give her insight into the significance of her laments about never sampling unbridled pre-martial kissing and petting, really should be addressed to her ears alone. But since my views on the subject must be channeled through this column, here goes:

Her attitude towards heterosexual expression of love is distinctly morbid. Her pre-marital prudery and post marital laboring of what she "missed" earlier are opposite extremes of the same line of thinking.

She is more or less obsessed with the notion that sexuality is the alpha and omega of devotional relatedness between male and female; which may be true of the animal kingdom, but doesn't apply to human beings.

Thinks Erotica Is All of Love

SHE imputes preposterous degree of undue importance to erotic phenomena, which causes her to lose sight of the abiding, real, rational values (or magnetic qualities) implicit in mental and spiritual (or call it temperamental) congeniality between man and woman; such, for instance, as attracted you to her in the beginning, and keeps you fondly faithful despite her foolishness cited above.

Her tedious screening of your feelings and motives as regards your kissing-history, also her emphasis on the "thrills" of kissing and regret for sensations missed, also her indelicate gaping envy of unmarried couples seen lollygagging on moonlit roads, all signify a pretty salacious trend of interest, now that the wraps are off her feelings; and there is no "sense" to that sort of thing.

It amounts to an insidious, not uncommon form of emotional sickness, usually inculcated by ignorant authoritarian influences in a child's early years; and is sometimes the compulsive origin of promiscuity or infidelity in later life. Thus from the medical slant, your wife's backward-looking poses a need for psychiatric therapy; which is the only prescription I can offer that might help her understand the truth of what you've been telling her. M. H.

Mrs. Carr to Be Hostess for Film

Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr will be hostess on Wednesday, April 14, at 4:30 at the first of a series of private showings of a recently released film, "Meeting the Deadline." The film will be followed by a tea.

Among other hostesses interested in this scientific approach to the problem who are offering their homes for similar teas are Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Harold Walker and Mrs. Martin Vogel, who will conclude the series with a garden party in May.

The special functions committee includes Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, chairman; Mrs. Owen Brewster, Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. Charles Stanley White, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong and Mrs. George A. Thorpe.

Spotty Carpets

Sometimes spots or light-and-shade areas develop on solid-color rugs or carpets. They are not soil. The pile has been crushed by the weight of furniture or where most walking has occurred. The sides of the fibers do not reflect light in the same way as when they are upright. Vacuum cleaning serves to lift the fibers back to their natural position. Pile crushing should be avoided in the first place, however. Turn a carpet or rug end-for-end now and then, and change the position of heavy furniture.

Dr. Wambaugh Tells Session—

ERP Needs Supplement Of Home Front Morale

By Genevieve Reynolds

"The United States cannot relax its efforts or consider its work ended now that the European Recovery Program has been passed by Congress." So warned Dr. Sarah M. Wambaugh, world authority on international plebiscites, in an address yesterday at the opening session of the Women's Action Committee for Lasting Peace's fifth annual convention in the Shoreham Hotel.

She told the some 150 delegates present that quick appropriation of necessary funds, ratification of 16 bilateral treaties by the Senate, sustaining of home morale in the face of possible high prices and shortages plus firmness in the face of propaganda are all essential to the success of the program.

Dr. Wambaugh of Cambridge, Mass., who has held diplomatic rank four times—once as adviser to the Chief of United States Mission to Observe Greek Elections in 1946—called upon the women of the country to be "steadfast under the waves of propaganda loosed against us." This propaganda against us will become worse, she predicted.

Confidence Needed

"For instance, we have been told, ad nauseum, that we should not support Greece because the government is fascist. It is easy for those who know the facts to prove that the Greek government is not fascist," she explained, "but those who do not know Greek affairs ought to develop confidence in our side until they learn the facts.

"No doubt, we shall be told, most untruly," she continued, "that the French and Italian governments are unevil. The basic answer, of course, is that we are not supporting governments, but the independence of small states and the right of each to choose the government they want. What we are opposing is conquest, aided by ideological forces and working behind an ideological screen. Russia wants to screen her conquests because the international conscience has progressed so far as to outlaw conquest."

"Building on the national and personal misfortunes of each war-torn country of Europe and Asia, fanatic Communist organizers promise Utopia," she declared. "Trained in Moscow in the technique of seizing power, they use chicanery and terror to win the idealists, the unhappy and disaffected. Then, on signal from Moscow, they use this carefully organized armed minority to overthrow the government. We see through this technique now, but to combat it we must ourselves perfect a new technique. This we are doing in our Foreign Aid Program."

Hope that economic reconstruction brings to intended Communist victims is the best answer the United States can give to combat the Russian technique, according to the speaker.

Panel Is Held

Speaking on the same panel as Dr. Wambaugh during the afternoon gathering were several other consultants of the WACLP, including Mrs. Vera Wadsworth Beggs, business woman of Patterson, N. J.; Mrs. Burnett Mahon, former member of the board of directors of the New York Committee of the League of Nations Association; Dr. Mabel Newcomer, chairman, department of economics, sociology and anthropology of Vassar College and only woman delegate to the United Nations Fund; Harold E. Schneider, former head of UNRRA's training program and currently director on Commission of International Education for Reconstruction.

Mrs. Mahon called upon members of the WACLP to demand immediate congressional action so the United States can participate in and have a vote in the World Health Organization meeting scheduled for June in Geneva. "Neither germs, disease nor malnutrition wait for an act of the United States Congress," she asserted.

Mrs. Mahon said that one of the most spectacular health achievements was the control of malaria with DDT in Greece. Other activities carried on by the commission include teaching of sanitation in Ethiopia; a large mission in China to train doctors and nurses; scholarships for Austria, Poland and Hungary.

Discusses DP Bill

The new displaced persons bill, known as the Wiley bill, was discussed by Mrs. Beggs. She declared that this new bill, scheuled to be introduced this week, sets up too many restrictions on DPs, making it impossible for the allotted yearly 50,000 to enter the United States. The provisions of the Wiley bill call fo radmission of 100,000 DPs over a period of two years.

Following her talk on the DPs, convention delegates adopted a resolution urging Congress to take prompt action providing for the admission of at least 100,000 displaced persons per year, and that all refugees be admitted without discrimination as to nationality or race and without unreasonable restrictions as to occupation at time of seeking refuge.

Dr. Mabel Newcomer, termed the extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, which will expire in June, as an essential part of our program for solving some of our more pressing international problems." To let the RTA lapse would run counter to the aims of the International Trade Organization, which the United States has taken the lead in fostering," she explained. "Freer world trade is essential to our continued prosperity. It is going to be difficult at best to persuade the less industrialized countries to reduce trade barriers for our benefit. It will be impossible to do so unless we take the initiative in making such reductions."

European countries complain that we change our minds too much; that we persuade them to adopt a program and then back out, according to Dr. Newcomer, adding, "the thing to do is to make up our minds on foreign trade and stick to it."

During the morning session, Mrs. Norman deR. Whitehouse, national president of the WACLP, challenged the women of America to wield their full potential power in the issues now at stake in the world in the world crisis.

At the conclusion of her report, Mrs. Whitehouse announced her resignation as national president to a new general committee slated to be elected. Mrs. Dana Converse Backus of New York, vice chairman of the organization was named to serve as interim chairman.

Mrs. Whitehouse served as national chairman of the committee from its inception until May, 1946, when the late Dr. Emily Hickman accepted the chairmanship and Mrs. Whitehouse was elected national president.

By Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

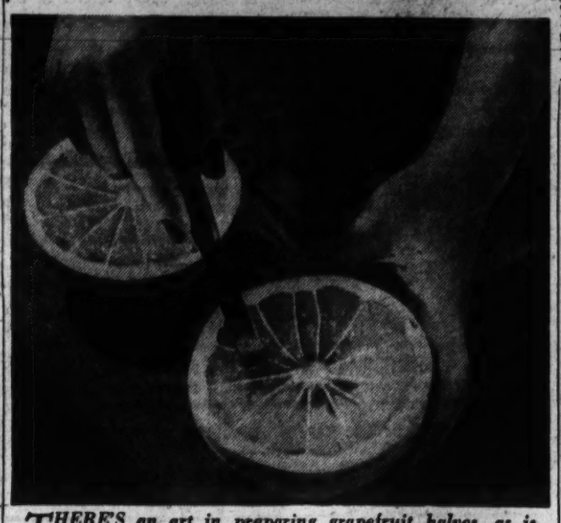
Rum Pie Recipe Is Supplied



THERE'S an art in preparing grapefruit halves, as is shown in this deft demonstration with a Duncan seeded. Use a sharp knife, but do not run it around the entire outer edge of the fruit. Loosen sections by cutting around each individual section along membrane and skin. Do not remove center core before loosening sections. If a center cavity is desired for a garnish or topping, remove the core with knife or snip out with scissors after sections have been loosened. The Duncan grapefruit, a favorite with native Floridians, is particularly abundant on the market this year

Here is a recipe for rum pie which I believe is the sort S. N. is looking for:

RUM PIE

3 egg yolks
1½ cups milk
⅛ teaspoon salt
¾ cup sugar
1½ tablespoons gelatin
¼ cup cold water
4 tablespoons light rum
3 egg whites
1 baked pie shell
Thin slices of sponge or pound cake
½ cup cream, whipped
3 tablespoons grated semi-sweet chocolate

Beat egg yolks slightly. Add milk, salt and sugar. Cook over low heat until of soft custard consistency. Remove from heat. Soak gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Add to hot mixture. Cool until mixture begins to congeal. Fold in rum and stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour 1/3 of mixture into baked pie shell. Place thin slices of sponge or pound cake on top of custard. Pour on remaining custard and place in refrigerator until firm. Before serving, spread with the whipped cream which has been sweetened to taste. Sprinkle grated chocolate over top.

Is there a "Well Baby Clinic" in Washington where children can receive "shots" free?

The Polk Health Center, at 7th and P sts. nw., is an immunization center operated by the District of Columbia Health Department. Free shots are given here to District citizens of all ages. There are also a number of Child Health Centers in the city. Further information about them can be obtained by calling the District Health Department. I note that you write from a town in a neighboring State. If you are resident there it would be best to call your local Health Department about free shots as service in the District is limited to Washington residents.

Several weeks ago, some food —gravy, I believe—was spilled on a gray wool suit. I tried removing it with soap and water, then had it cleaned. A brown stain still remains. Can you tell me how to take it out?

C. V. P.

Hot water will set a gravy stain. Could this have happened in this case? If so, it will be very hard to get out the spot. Try sponging it yourself with carbon tetrachloride or other cleaning fluid over an absorbent pad. Next time it goes to the cleaners, point out the spot to him, tell him what you think caused it, and ask him to try particularly to remove it. Best thing to do as soon as the material is gravy spotted is to sponge with clear cold water.

Enjoy Your BREAKFAST

Churchill Adds Nuggets To Noted Wit Collection With Parliament 'Asides'

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THOSE WHO knew the late Ramsey MacDonald, once Britain's Prime Minister, will be interested to learn that his younger daughter, Sheila, is engaged to half-American, Van Slyke Lockhead, who hails from Montreal. They are to be married the beginning of May, shortly before Sheila's brother, Malcolm, leaves England for Burma.

Speaking of Prime Ministers, a member of Parliament, here for 24 hours, added two gems to our collection of Churchilliana.

Discussing a well known politician who had switched from the out-of-power Liberal Party to the in-power Labor Party then, as Labor popularity diminished, returned to the Liberal fold, Mr. Churchill quipped "It's the only case I know of a rat swimming back to a sinking ship."

In Parliament, the former Prime Minister was urging that members should get on with their business, "leave recriminations about Tehran, Yalta, Potsdam to history," Churchill continued, then from the corner of his mouth he rumbled in a pseudo-confidential aside audible in the rafters "A history, I might add, which I am writing!" Even the dourest Laborites roared with laughter. The Churchill history, by the way, is being written by an unusual technique. Mr. Churchill dictates, then his words are typed on a big piece of paper unusually widely margined. The sheet is pinned on an easel-like board—then Mr. Churchill stands off, examines it, makes corrections with wide pencil sweeps as if he were wielding his favorite paint brush!

Things to Look for on Tour

THIS SATURDAY embassies, legations, houses around Sheridan Circle will be opened to the public the admission charge benefiting Washington's Home for Incurables. Elys at 2419 Massachusetts ave., the Max O'Rell Truitt's at 2329 S st., the George Hewitt Myers at 2310 S st., Mrs. George Mesta's at 2300 S st., and Romanian Legation. The Ambassadresses, hosts and hostesses will be on hand to greet the guests. New Year's Burmese Style

LATELY, THIS department has been jaundiced with spring fever. An invitation to a Burmese New Year party perked us up no end. Yup, April 16 is New Year's Day in Buddist Burma. Here, their embassy is going to celebrate with a conventionally western cocktail party followed up by a Burmese curry.

A Burmese curry is very special—you start with a mountain of rice, pile on top deliciously curious oddments from dozens of dishes. The rice, old Burma hands tell us, is out of this world, because it is cooked in coconut juice instead of water.

In Burma New Year's marks the start of monsoon, when the rains begin, and so naturally, an enjoyable feature of the celebration is everyone dousing everyone else with water. The delicate problem facing Burmese Ambassador U So Nyun, is how to carry on with this custom in his Washington Embassy. Helpful State Department officials have suggested rigging a shower over the embassy's door, or rounding up batches of atomizers, filling them with cologne as they do down in Rio de Janeiro during their gay, pre-Lenten carnival. Anyway, it wouldn't be a bad idea for guests to bring along their mackintoshes! Incidentally, the newly created Burmese Republic is toying with the idea of choosing April 16 their national holiday. It is a tough decision to make because holidays are dime a dozen in fun-loving Burma!

Actress Finds—

Red Stands For Trouble (In Tresses)

By Peggy Preston

Nature endowed redheads with glorious coloring. But it gets them into trouble every time they try a new shade of makeup or dress fabric.

Take the case of that pretty flaming-haired young actress, Patricia Marmont, who is appearing at the National Theater this week in "An Inspector Calls."

"The only color I really like is red," she sighs. "And it is positively poisonous on me."

So she contents herself with a constant round of such colors as brown, beige, peach and blue. Unlike most redheads, she doesn't wear green well. "It clashes with my particular shade of hair," she claims.

Likes All White Costumes

For variation Patricia likes all white costumes. While black interests her she doesn't consider it especially becoming. Redheads must stick pretty closely to brown tones, she believes, for they lend more substance to the color of the hair.

Patricia goes so far as to wear brown lipstick. And most becoming it is, too. Her favorite is a red brown shade made by John-Frederics, and she also likes Burn-Sugar by Elizabeth Arden. The rest of her makeup she keeps at a minimum, as neutral as possible.

PATRICIA MARMONT

She uses a light cream base under a thin coating of page powder. Rouge is not for her and she never wears anything but colorless nail polish.

But she gives a lot of care and attention to her crowning glory. Her locks get a good brushing every night and a dousing in hot water and soap every five days. She is a devotee of home permanents, and gives herself one every six months or so.

Patricia has the fair, fine grained skin that we associate with residents of the British Isles. Born in this country of British parents, she was just a few years old when her family returned to London. She is just now making her first return visit to the land of her birth and she claims that her year in America has done wonders for her complexion, hair and general physical well being.

American Climate Praised

"Your good food and sunny climate agrees with me," she grins.

Patricia does not believe in the popular theory that British women have better complexions than those in America.

"It may have been true at one time," says Patricia. "But your superior diet is giving your people a healthier glow than we have in England today."

She also commends Americans on their use of makeup. British women, according to Patricia, have not learned to use cosmetics with proper artistry and only a small group uses them at all. This, she thinks, puts them at a disadvantage.

"No one knows better than I how important a lipstick is—even if it has to be a brown one."

Shabby Window Shades

House paint thinned with one fourth as much linseed oil can be used to renovate shabby window shades. Stretch the shades flat and rub the paint into the fabric with a soft cloth. Buy as close to the original color of the shade as possible.

Exercises Will Give 'Touch of Venus'

By Ida Jean Kain

THE flat chest fashion has gone for good—hallelujah! Feminine curves on the classical order are de rigueur, and the modern woman would like nothing better than to be endowed with one touch of Venus . . . by fair means, or artificial.

But when it comes to improving the figure, there is no measurement as baffling as the bosom. The breasts are essentially glands, and glands are always mysterious. Some overweights with a problem bust seem fearful that exercise may be enlarging . . . others are afraid exercise might shrink this measurement. It does neither. The breasts are supported by muscle tissue which, of course, is affected by exercise—but exercise does not grow fat, and diet cannot reduce fat that isn't there.

Our model Barbara Anne was just as skeptical as the next woman. Twenty pounds off would bring her weight to beautiful normal. But off where? The waist, hips and thighs. She did not want to change the bust measurement. We took off 20 pounds and her figure is now a perfect 36 bust measurement. That's because she reduced her weight gradually and on a perfect diet, and exercised regularly to tone the pectoral muscles. An inadequate diet which lowers vitality also adversely affects the bust because glandular functioning depends upon the general state of health.

Does Exercise Help?

Now to answer the question . . . will diet help to reduce an overly large bust? Yes, if the size has been increased by fatty deposits. The normal size depends primarily on glands and structure. The overly large bust is usually caused by an excess of fat, and reducing will help to normalize this measurement.

Sagging of the bust contour may be caused by excess weight which drags down the delicate tissues. Or, it may be due to lack of tone in the skin and surrounding muscles even when weight is nearly normal. That calls for exercise.

The role of exercise in improving this part of the figure will be understood better if you think of the breast as being attached to and supported by powerful muscles which spread over each side of the chest. These muscles are fan-shaped, with the open part of the fan along either side of the breast bone, and the handle of the fan inserted in the upper arm.

Exercise helps the underdeveloped girl to improve the appearance of this measurement by expanding the chest and straightening the shoulders. Exercise normalizes, and all exercise is developing for the girl who is underdeveloped.

Any arm exercises which bring the pectoral muscles vigorously into action help beautify this part of the figure. Archery is par excellent for this purpose. The swim strokes, particularly the backstroke and breast stroke, work wonders for the water offers resistance. They can also be adapted to calisthenics with good results. The overweight with a heavy bust should wear a bra with the support from underneath, while exercising.

Dieticians to Study Career Openings

The spotlight will be turned on the many opportunities for careers in dietetics Saturday when dieticians of the District of Columbia hold their annual meeting at the Shoreham Hotel.

High school and college home economics students, as well as all local dieticians and women in related fields, are invited to sessions of the all-day meeting, which will feature talks on various phases of dietetics work. Speakers will include Miss Ruth Crane, station WMAL, and Miss Mabel Flanley, of New York, public relations counsel.

"There are tremendous opportunities for women in dietetics now," Miss Marjorie Woods, president of the organization and chief of the dietetics section, United States Public Health Service, said in announcing the meeting. "We have a difficult time filling the many requests for dieticians in hospitals, industry, colleges, and public and private welfare."

Invitations to Saturday's meeting may be obtained at local high schools or from Miss Georgia Smith, cafeteria department, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

Belgian Prince Here Honors War II Dead

Prince Regent Charles of Belgium yesterday gave President Truman a Belgian Croix de Guerre for the American Unknown Soldier of World War II.

Members of the Prince's official party attended the brief ceremony in the President's oval office as they continued their 10-day visit here as guests of the President.

After the presentation, the President talked with the Prince Regent, Belgian Prime Minister Paul-Henri Spaak, Economic Minister Paul de Groote, Baron Silvercruys, Belgian Ambassador, and Alan G. Kirk, American Ambassador to Belgium.

At the request of Baron Silvercruys, the President autographed copies of the toasts exchanged at the state dinner held for the Belgians on Tuesday night at the White House.

Prince Charles, who moved from the White House, where he stayed Tuesday night, to Blair House, visited the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, laying a wreath there, and Mount Vernon.

House Unit to Give Early Attention to Daylight Time Bill

Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) said yesterday the Senate-approved bill to let Washington have daylight saving time each summer will be given early attention in his House District Judiciary Subcommittee.

O'Hara, although opposed to daylight saving time himself, made clear that there would be no effort to hold up consideration of the bill.

Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.), author of a measure like the one passed by the Senate, applauded the Senate action and said he would seek to have its bill substituted for his own to speed final passage.

Van Zandt to Address Almas Temple Lunch

Representative James E. Van Zandt, of Pennsylvania, will be the guest of honor and principal speaker Friday at 12:30 p. m. at the weekly Almas Temple luncheon in the Sphinx Club, 1315 K st. nw.

Van Zandt, who served as National Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars three times, will discuss a timely topic—"Tense World Conditions."

School Nurse Found Slain

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. ANN LEWIS, 36, resident nurse at the fashionable Bolles Military School for Boys, was found bludgeoned to death and burned in her flaming dormitory room Tuesday in Jacksonville, Fla. Police yesterday were questioning faculty members and students. Mrs. Lewis was the niece of former Maryland Senator Radcliff and a member of a prominent Eastern Shore family

Record 4994 Votes Cast In Alexandria

A total of 4994 votes were cast in Tuesday's Democratic city primary in Alexandria.

The total vote, certified yesterday to the clerk of the Alexandria Corporation Court, showed the primary turnout to be the biggest vote on record for an Alexandria city election.

Nominated were Albert A. Smoot, Leroy S. Bendheim, Marshall J. Beverley and Roy C. Bragg. Bragg pushed out David D. Squires as final returns came in.

Tantamount to Election

The nominations are tantamount to election in the general city election June 3, since Alexandria is dominantly Democratic.

The four nominees, under a seven-member council setup to be created September 1 in accord with a March referendum, will make up a council majority, baring a surprise June election upset.

To hold over into the new council will be the three present at-large councilmen: Mayor William T. Wilkins, R. Samuel Luckett and John W. Tulloch. In accord with the referendum, the new council will be made up entirely of at-large councilmen.

Smoot lives in the First Ward, Bendheim in the Second, Beverey in the Fourth, and Bragg in the Sixth, assuring nearly all sections of the city with representation. Whether the at-large council plan would exclude some sections from representation figured is the heated referendum campaign.

Final unofficial returns from the primary gave Smoot, 2626 votes; Bendheim, 2322; Beverley, 2290; Bragg, 1947; Squires, 1820; Arthur F. Campbell, 1627; John J. Ewald, 1531; Randall Hicks, 1447; Claude Harris, 1369; J. T. Worthington, 878, and Ernest L. Mankin, 712.

Helen Bryan Goes on Trial For Contempt

Helen R. Bryan of New York, executive secretary of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, yesterday went on trial in District Court before Justice Richmond B. Keech on charges of contempt of Congress.

Miss Bryan was indicted for failure to produce membership records of her organization and a list of contributors upon order of the House Un-American Activities Committee in April, 1946. Some 17 other executives of the Anti-Fascist group have been sentenced or await sentencing on the same charges.

Ernie Adamson, former chief counsel for the committee, testified yesterday that Miss Bryan failed to turn over the records when the committee subpenaed them. Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray then rested his case.

Chief counsel for the defense is O. John Rogge, former Justice Department attorney.

John Howard Lawson, Hollywood screen writer, will face trial in District Court Monday on contempt of Congress charges stemming from the recent Hollywood probe. Lawson is one of 10 writers facing charges of contempt and is the first to come to court.

'Condition' Stops D. C. Asking Funds For Tuberculars

The District's "financial condition" prevents the Commissioners from seeking deficiency appropriations to pay bills for 10 tubercular women patients who refuse to leave Freedmen's Hospital, Commissioner Guy Mason disclosed yesterday.

Mason

In a letter to Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing, Mason said the District discontinued paying the patients' bills as of March 31.

"The Health Department stands ready and willing to move these patients to Glenn Dale Sanatorium immediately," he said, but the Commissioners "have no intention" of moving them forcibly.

The move was ordered because appropriations for care of the city patients at Freedmen's already are overdrawn.

Herman A. Johnson, assistant superintendent at Freedmen's, said last night the patients still refuse to leave the hospital. They are "looking and waiting for an answer from the Commissioners" to their letter asking the city heads to seek deficiency funds from Congress, he said.

Legislators Enjoy Free Helicopter Flights Over D. C.

A lot of Congressmen yesterday admittedly got a kick out of free helicopter flights here yesterday under the auspices of the Helicopter Council, Aircraft Industries of America.

The rotoplane rides, in Bell and Sikorsky craft, were part of a demonstration put on by the council yesterday—and to be continued today—on the parade ground of Fort McNair (Army War College). Army, Air Corps, Marine and Coast Guard helicopters participated in the exhibition.

Typical of the Congressmen's reaction to the helicopter flights—their first in virtually all cases—was that of Representative James H. Morrison (D., La.). "It's tops," he said, after a rotoplane flight over Washington Channel, onto Hains Point, and back to the parade grounds.

Lawyer Pleading Pickpocket Case Has Pocket Picked

Joseph Rotwein, attorney appointed to defend a pickpocket suspect, wasn't sure last night how he would make out—but it wasn't all good.

A District Court jury, after debating from 3:30 to 10:45 p. m. yesterday the case of John C. Corbett, 26, of 1531 6th st. nw., charged with filching $38 from the pocket of a streetcar passenger, January 19, reported itself hopelessly hung and was dismissed.

At the same late hour, Rotwein said he was still out—of his own wallet and about $25, apparently lifted from his pocket during yesterday's trial. His client, Rotwein said, swore innocence.

Assistant United States Attorney John Conliff asked Associate Justice David A. Pine to set the retrial for next week. The justice took the matter under advisement.

Rosemary's Invention Makes Television Obsolete

Rosemary Nelson of 408 N. George Mason dr., Arlington, Va., is only 3 years old, but she's quite a little lady.

Rosemary: Hello.

Daddy: Hello, this is Daddy.

Rosemary: Oh, hello Daddy. Hold the phone a minute while I get our Easter Lily. . . . Here it is; smell our Easter Lily, Daddy.

Daddy: You know I can't smell anything over the phone, Rosemary.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I believe that the service record of Mrs. Jackson's maid can be topped by Mamie Keyes.

She came to work for my parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Behrend, in 1912.

After my mother died, Mamie followed Mr. Behrend to the household of my sister, Mrs. C. H. Small, and she's still going strong.

Amy B. Goldstein,
3800 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Dear Mrs. Goldstein:

A record like that speaks well for both the employer and the employe. I doubt that any other domestic worker is going to be able to top it. Bill.

FOR PUZZLE FANS ONLY

Mrs. Donald E. V. Henderson of 4460 Greenwich pkwy. nw., is curious. (This is a trait which is peculiar to women—and men.)

Mrs. Henderson has been working on that Disabled American Veterans puzzle contest which appeared as a full-page ad in The Washington Post on March 30, and she has gotten her point score up above the 900 mark.

She's curious to know how other puzzle fans are making out, and suggests that we conduct an "auction" to find out who has rolled up the biggest score so far.

So anybody who thinks he can top 900 points is hereby invited to speak up. But do NOT send me your solution. Just your score.

Ann Duvall Peach, Eastern View, Upperville, Va.: Living on a farm so far from Washington certainly puts you at a disadvantage in your attempt to claim some of our Give-Away kittens, and I'd like to help you; but we just can't undertake to accept requests for pets. DON'T BE A JAYWALKER

Most jaywalkers are somewhat indignant when they're stopped by a policeman.

"After all," they argue, "it's my neck that I'm risking. Why should it be any concern of yours?"

It's the policeman's concern for many reasons. In the first place, when he whistles you back to the curb he's merely doing the job he's hired to do.

Secondly, he's trying to protect other pedestrians. When one goof starts out in spite of the red light or the "don't walk" sign, other unthinking waiters are almost sure to follow.

Thirdly, motorists find nothing more unnerving than to start across an intersection on a green light and then find themselves forced to swerve or slam on their brakes because of a foolhardy pedestrian.

But perhaps the best reason of all for mending our safety habits is that advanced by Florence Sweigart of 22 Grafton st., Chevy Chase, Md.

Mrs. Sweigart points out that it's almost impossible to teach children to obey the rules when they see adults ignoring them.

Children learn more by example than from our lectures. What answer can Mama give when she says "We've got to wait for the green light" and junior comes back with:

"Why, Mommy? That lady over there isn't waiting for the green light."

THE BOY WAS "BROUGHT UP" PROPERLY

Mrs. J. W. Jackson of 2817 N. 23d st., Arlington, Va., did her shopping with one eye on the clock the other day.

She had an appointment to keep, and only minutes to spare. So, impatient with the leisurely pace of the department store's escalator, Mrs. Jackson speeded things up a bit by walking up the mechanical stairway.

As she neared the top, she became conscious of the critical gaze of a small boy. When Mrs. Jackson alighted, he patiently explained things to her.

"That's an escalator," he piped. "You didn't have to walk up."

Lewis Tangle Stumps Cabinet

By Drew Pearson

John L. Lewis would have got a Falstaffian chuckle out of the big Cabinet session to consider what the Government should do about him. Cabinet advisers had a hard time deciding how the mine strike could be solved.

KRUG

One group of advisers wanted to bargain with Lewis before slapping an injunction on him. They were: Press Secretary Charles Ross, Administrative Assistant John R. Steelman, Secretary of the Interior Krug, who tangled with Lewis last year, and Federal Conciliator Cyrus Ching, former head of the U. S. Rubber Co., whom Lewis had bitterly denounced a few days before.

Attorney General Tom Clark then explained the legal aspects of the Taft-Hartley Act, advising that the Government could get an immediate injunction against the strikers. But, he warned, the injunction was sure to be appealed, which would result in a long, drawn-out proceeding.

"What's the country going to use for coal while this is being fought out in the courts?" he asked.

After considerable debate, Secretary Krug finally veered round to using the injunction right away.

"If we're going to crack down, and that seems to be the only solution, let's do it quick and crack down hard," argued Krug.

The Interior Secretary reminded Truman that the country had only 16 days' supply of coal left.

Opposite Advice

Presidential Adviser Clark Clifford, however, contended that the thing to do would be to let the strike proceed for a time. While others at the secret meeting listened in amazement, the young brain-truster advised Truman that if a real crisis developed from a coal shortage, Lewis would be easier to lick in the courts.

This contribution evoked no favorable response. Clifford then added that, in his opinion, Truman couldn't "lose" in a court fight with Lewis regardless of how quick the Government moved. If an injunction were granted and upheld through appeals, he argued, the President would gain prestige by putting Lewis in his place.

At this point, the President became quite irritated.

"Oh, forget about me," he broke in. "Let's talk about what's good for the country. This is a serious matter. With coal supplies running short, we can't let this strike go on indefinitely. We'll have to do the best we can under the powers Congress has given us. However, before making any decision, I want to give further study to the report of the fact-finding board that has been studying the issues involved here."

With that, Truman abruptly adjourned the meeting.

Making Democracy Live

The American people, if given half a chance, certainly pitch in to work at the democratic principles they believe in.

Last week, this column suggested the idea of reaching people behind the iron curtain and on the edge of the iron curtain with radio broadcasts aimed to make the Russian and Italian people think about a democratic peace and friendship with the United States; also that wrist watches plus other things European people covet be offered as prizes for the best letters on how to ensure a democratic peace in Europe.

After all, the Russians upon entering Berlin bought up wrist watches by the bushel. And if we could show them what our western world produces while simultaneously getting them to think about a democratic peace and friendship with the United States, then perhaps we could dent the iron curtain.

Biggest reason for the iron curtain, of course, is to prevent the Russian people from knowing how well off the rest of the world is.

Following publication of this column, I was deluged with telegrams with patriotic Americans offering wrist watches and other things coveted in Europe, as prizes for such a radio contest in Italy—where elections are so imminent—and later beamed to Russia.

Helbros offered 100 wrist watches. So did Bulova, Ingersoll and Harman. The Muskogee, Okla., Broadcasting Co. wired in that they would dig up 100. The Kruger Jewelry Co. in Austin, Texas, and Martin Gruenborn in Seattle also volunteered, together with offers of 100 Emerson radios, 100 Wings shirts, 100 Clippercraft suits, 100 Lee hats, 100 pairs of Endicott-Johnson shoes, and one Allis-Chalmers tractor for Italy, not Russia. (Sending a tractor to Russia would only play into the hands of the Soviet-run farms.)

As a result of all this, shortwave broadcasts are starting first to the Italian people. If even a fraction of them are made to think a little more about peace and democracy, it will be worth the effort.

Judges of the Italian contest will be Justice Ferdinand Pecora of the New York Supreme Court, Vincent Impellitteri, president of the New York City Council, and Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro of Baltimore. Further details of the contest on Italian democracy will be made public as it progresses.

Harllee Branch's Record

Few Government servants can serve their country during any length of time without arousing some criticism. If they don't, either they lack courage or hold unimportant positions.

The other day this column reported some critical facts regarding an old friend, Harllee Branch of the Civil Aeronautics Board, regarding his son's position with the law firm for Eastern Air Lines at a time when Mr. Branch was deciding highly controversial cases in favor of Eastern.

While the facts were true, it is also true that the usual interpretation based on a set of facts does not always follow.

While Harllee Branch would have been wiser had he persuaded his son to join another law firm, nevertheless this column, having paid tribute to Branch's abilities many times over the years, still believes in his integrity.

"Sagebrush" Smith, the movie extra who appeared in countless Western movies, refused to do a role in "Wanted," the Joel McCrea Western. "Can't do it," he explained to Producer Harry Sherman. "I got a date to help Roy Rogers outwit a gang of cattle-rustlin' extras out Republic Studios way."

Clifton Webb's popularity as a result of "Sitting Pretty" has brought him night club offers of $6000 a week. Webb dislikes night club work. Felix Young was the first to induce him to work in a cafe, by offering him $2000 a week and — although prohibition was still in effect—agreeing, by contract, to supply Webb with a bottle of French champagne at supper every night . . . Then she advertised again, this time mentioning that a relative sends her two American CARE packages every month. She received 2437 proposals.
